Stage Set for Draft Lottery Tomorrow

YOUNG MEN IN COUNTY WAIT TRAINING CALL

Drawing of Numbers To Start In Washington Tuesday At Noon; Takes 12 Hours.

ALL TO BE PUBLISHED

Numbers Affecting Richland Draftees To Be Published In Two Issues.

More than 9,000 Richland county young men and the county's three draft boards today awaited the drawing of registration numbers in a huge lottery in Washington tomorrow before taking the next step in the first peace-time conscription of men for army service.

The stage is set for the drawing in Washington which will get under way at noon Tuesday and continue well into the night and possibly until Wednesday morning. Numbers in the little capsules which will be drawn from a big bowl will determine the order in which men will be called for physical examinations and possibly a year of military training.

Men registered in Richland county were urged today to keep the lists of names and numbers published in yesterday's News-Journal so they will be available when the drawings are made.

All numbers that apply to Richland county will be published in The News-Journal Tuesday and Wednesday as they are drawn in Washington.

Since the highest number listed so far in Richland county is 3,402, all numbers above that which are drawn from the bowl tomorrow will not affect men registered here. Numbers up to 8,500 will be drawn to include the highest num-

Petain Receives Private Message From Roosevelt

VICHY, France —(AP)— A foreign minister spokesman said today Marshal Philippe Petain, France's chief of state had received from President Roosevelt a "personal message" which could be disclosed only by Petain "because of the privacy of its character."

The spokesman said the foreign ministry had been informed only orally of the arrival of the message.

Diplomatic sources here believed Roosevelt's note concerned the current negotiations between Petain and Adolf Hitler.

Vice Premier Pierre Laval was named foreign minister today to succeed Paul Baudoum, who became secretary of state attached to the presidency of the council.

The French cabinet held an emergency session and Laval headed for Paris to continue negotiations with France's new axis partners.

VOTE RULING

Presidential Ballots Can't Be Scratched, Herbert Says.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Herbert held that electors could not vote for the presidential candidate of one party and the vice presidential aspirant of the opposing party on the separate Ohio presidential ballot at the Nov. 5 election. Herbert emphasized however, that his ruling did not apply to the state-county ballot.

One Dies, Six Injured In Accidents

Carl Hunger, 46, Railway Employe At Crestline, Killed Near City.

One person was killed and six others were injured in three traffic accidents in the Mansfield area over the week-end, while at least 18 persons died in Ohio as ideal weather attracted thousands of motorists to the highways.

Carl Hunger, 46, of R. D. 2, Mansfield, a Pennsylvania railroad employe in Crestline, was killed in an accident on Trimble road west of the city early Sunday. He was Richland county's 12th traffic fatality of the year and the first in 77 days. Last year at this time, 22 persons had been killed.

Hunger, who was on his way home from work, suffered a broken neck when his car, driven by his son, Carl, jr., crashed into a telephone pole. The youth told officers the headlights went out and caused him to lose control of the car.

A motorist who had been driving behind the car said the lights had been flickering for several minutes before the crash.

Mrs. Hunger, riding in the car, received cuts on her head and face and was taken to General hospital. Her condition was described as "good" today, but it was not expected she will be able to return home for two or three days. The son was not injured.

The accident occurred about 3 a. m. between route 39 and Geddes avenue, west of the city limits. Hunger was dead before a passing motorist could take him to General hospital. Hunger was a native of Shelby, but lived near Mansfield most of his life.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the Jones Memorial, with Rev. Albert Linder, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, officiating. Burial

MAJOR ADDRESS BOOKED TONIGHT

President Makes Bid For New York and New Jersey Ballot Support.

(By Associated Press)

ABOARD ROOSEVELT TRAIN EN ROUTE TO NEWARK, N. J. —A political foray into populous New Jersey and New York—two states which represent an important total of 63 electoral votes Nov. 5—started President Roosevelt off today on the final full week of pre-election campaigning.

Topping off a crowded program calling for a motor tour into Newark, Kearny and Bayonne, N. J., and all five boroughs of New York City will be a major address at Madison Square Garden tonight. The address will be broadcast (NBC 10 p. m. EST).

New York state's 47 electoral votes constitute a political plum of first magnitude, and Mr. Roosevelt arranged to spend most of the day in the city which rolled up a 3-to-1 margin for him over Alf M. Landon in 1936 and enabled him to carry the state by more than 1,000,000 votes.

WILLKIE QUOTES HULL'S SPEECH

Calls It 'An Extraordinary Documentation of New Deal Futility.'

(By Associated Press)

ABOARD WILLKIE TRAIN ENROUTE TO LOUISVILLE — Wendell L. Willkie asserted today that Secretary of State Hull's speech Saturday night was "an extraordinary documentation of New Deal futility."

"The secretary pointed up more clearly than could any temporary critic of the New Deal the serious failure to organize a national economy capable of building rapidly an adequate defense," said Willkie in a statement issued on his campaign trip.

"The only solution to this crisis in our national leadership," the Republican presidential nominee said, "is to defeat the third term candidate."

Willkie said Hull "has made it more than ever obvious that such a defense was essential to the maintenance of our influence in foreign affairs.

"The secretary's statement that as early as June, 1935, 'speaking for the government, I pointed out that we would not serve the cause of peace by not having adequate powers of self-defense,' makes the whole tragedy of world conditions and our present precarious position in relation to them even more apparent.

U. S. TO CHECK MANSFIELD ON DEFENSE WORK

Sends Representative to City To Survey Industries For Federal Contract Jobs.

REPLIES TO CHAMBER

Routzon Says Decision Likely Answer to C. of C. Request For Defense Work.

Mansfield was one of the two cities in Ohio listed today for a survey by the defense commission which plans to put new life into "ghost" industries that have been stagnant for years in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Illinois, Associated Press dispatches from Washington said.

Chamber of Commerce Secretary John G. Routzon said the proposed survey was apparently in response to the Chamber's recent appeals to the defense board for a share of the government's war orders for Mansfield.

He said the Chamber had appealed to the defense commission on two occasions pointing out Mansfield's diversified industry as capable of handling defense contracts.

Labor Coordinator Sidney Hillman said the commission's program was planned to revitalize latent labor and plant capacities in the three-state area to meet national defense needs and that the program would be extended.

As the first step Hillman appointed Lauren W. Casaday, Pacific coast shipping executive, as field representative to come to Mansfield to obtain "full information regarding available facilities and personnel for national defense orders," dispatches said.

Revitalizing work will also be done in "single industry areas" where developments of new industries have caused plants to close down, leaving the population without useful enterprise.

In addition, the employment service of the Social Security board today reported establishment of a system designed to enable interstate movement of defense industry workers, with Cleveland as one of the 13 regional clearance headquarters sites.

Premier Seeks Aid of Turkey In New Crisis

Italians Attack by Land And Air as Conflict Extends to Balkans; Air Raid Alarms Scream In Athens 3 Times

BULLETIN

ATHENS, Greece—(UP)—British forces are "even now" fighting in behalf of Greece, the official radio station reported today, saying: "British forces are even now at hand."

BULLETIN

BUDAPEST—(AP)—Rumors were current in the Balkans today that Soviet Russia is preparing to take over the Dardanelles "protectively" as southeastern Europe nervously awaited some indication of Moscow's attitude over Italy's invasion of Greece.

(By Associated Press)

ATHENS—Greece fought with her little army today against invading Italian forces and announced officially that Great Britain was sending her "unlimited support."

Less than 12 hours after the Italians had attacked by land and air, the government issued this communique:

"Premier Metaxas conferred early this morning with the British minister, who told him that Greece in her fight against Italy would have the unreserved support of England to the fullest extent. British support will be unlimited.

"Metaxas also conferred with the Turkish minister to Athens and immediately afterwards communicated by telephone with the Greek minister in Ankara. The premier later communicated by telephone with the president of the Turkish republic, Inonu."

The urgent conversations with the highest authority in Turkey were taken as evidence that Greek's dictator, John Metaxas, is making every effort to bring the Turks in on his side.

Turkey and Britain have a mutual assistance pact, but the Turks are not directly bound to go to the aid of Greece.

The Greeks elected to fight rather than to bow to Italian demands for Greek territory and free passage for Italian troops.

Early this afternoon, soon after the communique was issued, air raid alarms screamed in Athens for the third time today. Intense anti-aircraft fire drove away four planes which flew over the city.

CONFER: Hitler, Duce Meet On Urgent Measures For Greece

FLORENCE, Italy—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini talked in complete harmony "on all present questions" here today as Italy took what were described as "urgent measures required to face the danger of the situation" in Greece.

A communique issued after the Axis leaders' first, three-hour session, merely said that their conversation, "in the spirit of the alliance between the two countries, developed as always in the most cordial form and show a complete identity of views on all present questions."

They began their first session at 11:30 a. m. and emerged at 1:30 p. m. for luncheon with their foreign ministers, Joachim Von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano and other dignitaries.

Warplanes droned overhead to keep the skies above Florence safe from air attack as the two leaders sat down at a large rectangular table in the massive Palazzo Vecchio, which serves as the city hall.

It was Hitler's second visit to Florence, which he saw first in May, 1938, when he came to Italy to solidify the Axis.

As they sat, Mussolini on one side of the table with Hitler at his right and Ribbentrop and Ciano seated across from the fuehrer, a bust of Machiavelli — who once worked in the room—looked down at them from one corner.

Today was the 18th anniversary

FEAR: U. S. Sees Possibility Of Further Balkan War Spread

NEWARK, N. J.—(UP)—President Roosevelt conferred with Secretary of State Cordell Hull today on the Greek-Italian conflict and White House officials reported fear that the hostilities may develop into an even more serious situation.

Mr. Roosevelt was expected some time today to freeze Greek credits in this country and formally proclaim United States neutrality in the new Balkan conflict.

White House Secretary Stephen T. Early, reported after Mr. Roosevelt's telephone conference that there is fear that an even more serious situation may be developing.

"There is a fear on the part of some officials that this move as reported by the press of Italy against Greece may not be a complete action but may be a preliminary move toward a more serious situation," he said. "By a more serious situation we refer to the whole Balkan picture."

A special telephone was connected with Mr. Roosevelt's private car upon his arrival here, and he talked at length to Hull.

Simple Trick Saves Marriage

Mrs. R. was young, pretty and domestic, and had been married four months. Before that, she had worked in an office as a stenographer, earning $30.00 a week.

But she was the domestic type, and while she tapped the typewriter her mind often strayed to "a home of her own," with a charming livingroom, replicas of early American furniture in the bedroom, and a blue and white kitchen—especially the blue and white kitchen.

These days-dreams threw a certain amount of glamour around Mr. R., who was good-looking, clever, but had an irritating habit of putting down every penny he spent in a little account book. But she explained it to herself by saying, "That's just his way."

The dream came true. She had the charming apartment with just what she wanted after she married Mr. R., and the first thing he presented her with was a notebook in which to put all the items of household expenditure. She had put a thousand dollars of her savings into their joint housekeeping scheme, which gave her the comfortable feeling of being independent.

In spite of being independent, loving the blue and white kitchen, and feeling certain there never had been a baby like the one she was expecting, Mr. R's penny-pinching began to get on her nerves.

Oh, for the blessed give-and-take of the office, and the pay envelope that came 'round every week, and the good times she and the rest of the office bunch had together. Not only was it the nickels and dimes Mr. R. questioned her about, but actually one night at dinner, he said the pie crust wasn't flaky and the tea-towels had a grayish look. Mrs. R. cried herself to sleep on the studio divan, and decided after the baby came she'd go to Reno.

Next day she called on her mother-in-law, whom, despite the relationship, Mrs. R. really liked immensely. She confided the whole tale of woe about the account book, the non-flaky pie-crust and the grayish tea-towels.

Her mother-in-law, who had a swell sense of humor, burst into laughter and said, "A chip off the old block." Then she whispered something in the girl's ear and both laughed heartily. "I went through the same thing with his father — that's your remedy."

A fortnight later, dish cloths were white as snow and the pie crust was flaky. And when the He-man asked about the expenditures and the household book, Mrs. R. answered, "I don't keep accounts any more — putting down two cents for a postage stamp, three cents for parsley, five cents for carrots, and making it all add up right, takes up too much time. When I worked in an office my time was worth about seventy-five cents an hour."

The He-man gasped.

"Besides, all that putting down two cents for this and that interrupts making the clothes for the baby."

He never said anything when she discussed the baby—all that was beyond his grasp. He wound up a bit embarrassed, "Well, darling, I've been looking at the dish towels, and they're white as snow, and the pie-crust is flaky, just like mother's."

"Yes," she answered, "it ought to be. I buy the pies from the same bakery your mother did, and I send the tea towels to the same laundry. We talked things over a couple of weeks ago when I was considering going to Reno. She advised laundry and bakery first."

BOTTLED DRINKS POPULAR

About 90 bottles of soft drinks were consumed for every person in the United States last year, during which time the American public bought more than half a billion dollars worth of bottled beverages.

VINEGAR HELPS.

Here's a trick for washing those colored deerskin gloves which are so very, very smart. Put a teaspoonful of vinegar into each water . . . into the first rich lukewarm suds, then into the clear rinsing water, and again into the final light sudsy rinse. Some of the color may come out; but if they are American-made and if you wash them quickly and don't rub soap into them, they won't lose much color nor will they be streaked.

The phonograph has a place in millions of homes. But today the standard kind that only plays records is being supplanted by a modern instrument which also has radio and a device for cutting home-made records. One type, the recordola, fits even modest purses.

Gold Cake.

1 cup sugar
½ cup butter
2 eggs
½ cup milk or cream, sweet or sour
1 tsp. lemon flavoring
2 tsp. baking powder
1¾ cups cake flour

Cream butter well, add sugar gradually, creaming well, then well beaten egg. If you use sour milk or cream add ½ teaspoon soda to milk, otherwise use milk and flour sifted with baking powder, add flavoring last. Bake in loaf or layers, at 350° F. and serve plain with ice cream or frosted, as you prefer.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Mindful of Olina sleeping after her severe attack of nervous headache, my tap upon her mother's door was so light that I was afraid it was entirely inaudible.

But Olga evidently had been expecting us. She opened the door immediately at my knock, and to my surprise I saw Olina sitting in an easy chair at the back of the room. But she did not send even a glance toward the door, and her mother slipped through it and closed it behind her before she spoke.

"Philip is waiting to see me?" she queried, and I made the mental comment that she was worth any amount of waiting.

"Yes, and most impatiently," I told her, smiling, but although her lips quirked into a returning smile, her eyes showed that while she was joyously anticipating the reunion with her suitor, some other consideration was for the moment paramount with her.

"May I ask you some questions?" she queried, "with the stipulation that if you cannot answer them, you will not hesitate to tell me so?"

"It is the only course we can follow just now," Lillian replied gravely, "but let us hope that they can be answered. And you certainly may ask as many as you please, on any subject."

"Thank you," she returned. "I suppose you saw," she turned to me, "that Olina had awakened."

"Yes, I saw her sitting in the big armchair," I returned.

"Poor child!" her mother sighed. "Her headache is gone, she is not physically ill, but her spirits are very low."

I knew that in Lillian's mind there was a vicious echo of my mental comment, "Serves her right!" But it was not a sentiment one could voice to Olina's mother, even though she shared our knowledge that her daughter's low spirits were due wholly to her disappointment in having seen her scheme to separate Noel and Mary dashed to pieces by her future step-father's surprising action at the rehearsal of my play.

When he had given Mary the accolade of his approval of her rendition of her role, and when he had asked Noel to bring his "sister" and his wife up to him, he had defined Olina's status with Noel in such fashion as to make it forever impossible for her to do any more angling for the attentions of Mary's husband.

That the blow was a bitter one to Olina, I had no doubt. It was no wonder she had gone to bed with a nervous headache. But I found no pity for her in my soul, although I could not help be moved by the maternal concern in Olga's face. She was all mother now, her lost kingdom and her waiting sweetheart alike forgotten.

"My heart aches for my child," she said, "even though I know, as you must, that she, alone, is responsible for the sorrow and disappointment which are hers now. She will get over it, of course—her heart was never deeply involved, but—I should like to do something to cheer her up, if I could."

I know what was coming now—Lillian's warning fingers beating a quick tattoo against my spine would have told me, if my own brain had not functioned, and I began to cast about for an answer to the request which I surmised was on Queen Olga's lips.

But she did not put it at first. Instead, she asked a question of me.

"Forgive me, Madge, if I seem insistent, but did your father say specifically that I should not tell Olina about the emeralds?"

Her voice dropped to a whisper as she finished, and I was confirmed in my belief—which had never wavered—that she was keeping her promise of saying nothing about the restoration of her famous jewels.

"Not in so many words," I said, "but the fact that he did not mention her when he gave me the message to you that you could tell Philip about them, indicated—"

My voice faltered at the sorrowful, disappointed look in her great eyes. But it was gone in an instant, and it was the queen who said quietly.

"I am answered. Pray do not give it another thought."

"But I shall," I said aflame with sudden resolution. "Wait here a minute!" I added, as I turned and fairly flew down the corridor toward my father's room.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—"The Long Voyage Home." Screenplay by Dudley Nichols from plays by Eugene O'Neill. Directed by John Ford. Principals: John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter, Barry Fitzgerald, Wilfrid Lawson, Mildred Natwick, John Qualen, Ward Bond, Arthur Shields, Joseph Sawyer, J. M. Kerrigan, Rafaela Ottiano.

The S. S. Glencairn was in a tropical port when its captain got orders to pick up a cargo of explosives in America and return to England. This is the story of her voyage, and of what happened to the motley group of seamen in her crew. These were:

Ole Olsen, a Swedish sailor who has saved his money to buy a farm (Wayne) Driscoll, an Irish seaman with his dukes up and a constant thirst (Mitchell); Smitty, an Englishman with a past (Hunter); Cocky, the steward (Fitzgerald); Axel, a tenderly sentimental Norwegian (Qualen); Yank, the tough American (Bond); and a philosophical sailor who is content with the sea (Shields). There are others, but around these the drama centers.

They are characters in which Director Ford always delights—lusty, gusty men in terrifying trouble. They meet a storm which kills Yank; Smitty is suspected of espionage—until dramatically the truth about his past comes out; the ship is attacked by bombers, and Smitty gets "home" that way; in port finally, Ole is saved only at the last minute for the farm; and Driscoll, Shanghaied in his place, takes a last ride out to sea. The others go back as they came.

It is a grand, imaginative job of story-telling. Ford at his best with the superlative camera work of Gregg Toland always prominent. Mitchell, Bond and Hunter have the best acting roles and do best by them, but every player, as usual in Ford pictures, is a "character."

If these aren't real seamen on a real sea, then neither will ever be captured for the screen.

"They Knew What They Wanted." Screenplay by Robert Ardrey from play by Sidney Howard. Directed by Garson Kanin. Principals: Charles Laughton, Carole Lombard, William Gargan, Frank Fay, Harry Carey, Janet Fox.

Fat little Tony Patucci, with a thriving California vineyard and money in the bank, was smitten by the looks of a thin little waitress in San Francisco. What he wanted was a wife and kids and he picked on her. But when he wrote he sent the picture of his romantic rogue of a helper, who wanted nothing more than to have fun and keep moving. The girl wanted to get away from the dishes and trays and was game to pay the price.

What none of 'em counted on was sex and the accident that postponed Tony's marriage to the girl. By telling the story straight-forwardly and honestly, Kanin and crew work up to a walloping dramatic climax. On the way there's sardonic humor, some sweet sentiment, and a characterization by Laughton so different you can forget Bligh, Ruggles and the Hunchback entirely. You may be surprised to see Fay, one-time m. c., in priestly raiment, and Gargan effective as a romantic heel. But you needn't be surprised if the direction seems original, striking and fresh—because Kanin ("A Man to Remember," "The Great Man Votes," "Bachelor Mother") is still delivering.

"The Thief of Bagdad." Screen play by Miles Malleson and Lajos Biro. Directed by Ludwig Berger, Michael Powell and Tim Whelan. Principals: Sabu, Conrad Veidt, June Duprez, John Justin, Rex Ingram.

Gloriously beautiful color distinguishes this Alexander Korda production about the little thief who conquered black magic to save and reunite the prince and beautiful princess. The sweep and spirit of fantasy are there even if some of the "effects" fall short of perfection. It's a good evening for the whole family.

Writer Asks Where He Has Failed

By GARRY MYERS, PH. D.

In writing this column, it has been my ardent wish to inspire hope and confidence in my readers and to help them capitalize on the best in themselves.

But every now and then, as I read your letters and meet a number of you face to face in various parts of the United States, I feel disturbed. I get the fear that my wish is not being realized.

Many a letter begins with something like this: "Ever so many times I have meant to write to you," or "I have written you a number of letters which I have not mailed." This implication—to me—is that the writer supposes I would not think the problem worthy of my consideration, or that I might just laugh at it. Of all things!

I much confess that such letters worry me. They make me wonder what I have said or failed to say that might cause any of my readers to believe anything like the foregoing. But, as I often have said, what a person thinks is so, is so to him. If any reader will tell me how to correct this false impression among some of my other readers, I shall, indeed, be grateful.

Don't Apologize.

Then, an occasional correspondent will apologize for the grammar, spelling, or writing with a pencil. I wish no one would, o long as it is legible. Often this person writes in the most dramatic and effective way. The best expression does not always consist of the abundance of good spelling and grammar. Is it vivid? Does it drive home the facts? Does it make one feel with the one who wrote? I often wish more of our teachers of English might inspire their pupils to say what they have to say just as these pupils feel it and not hamper them with constant fear about the form.

Now and then some one writes that she heard me lecture in her city and wanted to meet me and talk with me but supposed I would not wish "to be bothered with her."

As a matter of fact, she could have done me no greater honor than to let me meet her as a person who reads this column or anything else I write. Anyway, it's the conversation and personal correspondence I have with my readers which help me put myself in your place.

All Problems Serious.

Now all of us parents and teachers have a problem not unlike the one I write here about myself. Our children sometimes suppose that we might not count the problems which are very serious to them worthy of our consideration, or that we might ridicule them.

Sometimes a letter will make me think I am succeeding. I hope so because I suffer with my readers and use up a vast deal of energy which my fellow psychologists might consider wasteful and unscientific. Nevertheless, the chances are, I am not sympathetic enough. But I do wish to be sympathetic and helpful.

One thing more: if you suppose that you don't nearly measure up to some of the standards and achievements set forth in this column, keep on striving; celebrate the successes you have had which we don't write about. Perhaps we overlook many of the most essential ways in which you are a great and successful parent. Just remember, too, there are no perfect parents.

Let me send you a prayer I have written for you and me as parents. Just write me at 235 E. 45th St., N. Y. City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it. I also have some prayers for little children.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, Oct. 29.

A particularly strenuous and enterprising day is the augury based on very lively operations among major planets. How this heightened activity, quickened by aggressive faculties and forces working under high pressure, may prove productive and advantageous or end in aggravating and drastic defeat, depends upon the restraint, calm judgment and cool decisions exercised. Highly stimulated energies demand stern guidance.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which productive and happy results depend entirely on rigid self-control, calm decisions and well-thought out plans and methods rather than haste, reckless, impetuous and passionate conduct.

A child born on this day will have much ability and versatility, with energies and faculties which may be turned into very practical channels or developed into highly creative achievements of refined and artistic merit. Its inner feelings and subtle leadings should not be suppressed.

POPULAR ALL YEAR

Bottled soft drinks have become year-around favorites, where formerly they were popular only during hot weather. Large sales of beverages and other drinks at football games in the Fall and social and sporting events in the Winter and Spring are indicative of the American trend toward bottled drinks as all year products.

GLASS IN A BOTTLE

Glass manufacturers have developed a new seven-ounce beer bottle which is literally "a glass of beer in a bottle." Because of its low cost and economical contents the new bottle is appealing to women especially, who ordinarily drink only one glass of beer at luncheon or dinner in a hotel or restaurant.

NEW BOTTLES ANNOUNCED

Increasing popularity of bottled drinks has led to many innovations in modern packaging. Among them are the new handy quart milk bottle, which is shorter, stronger and easier to handle than the old type, and a new seven-ounce beer bottle which is literally "a glass of beer in a bottle."

Tomorrow's Problem.

When West leads the spade 9 here against South's 3-No Trumps, the dummy putting on the J, what card should East play, and why?

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

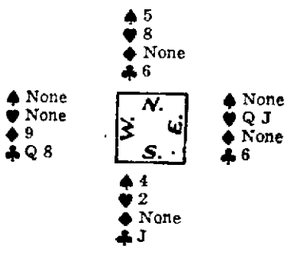
"The Authority on Authorities"

THREE LEAD THROWERS

AMONG THE lead-throwing end plays there are three principal types. The first and simplest of these can be used only in suit contracts, as it involves trumping a trick. The other two kinds may be employed at No Trumps as well as suit play. Occasionally a hand comes along which involves a combination of two of these types, or perhaps all three. In order to recognize the situations for them, it is, of course, necessary first to understand how they operate.

The first type of lead-throwing play is that which furnishes a ruff in dummy and the discard of a loser from the declarer's hand, or vice-versa. Here is an example:



With spades as trumps, it appears here as if South can take only one of the last three tricks. He seemingly has to lose a trick in clubs and a trick in hearts. But if he leads his club J, he will get two of the last three tricks. West, upon winning that trick, must return either a diamond or a club. Regardless of which he chooses, the declarer can trump the trick in the dummy and discard the heart from his own hand. This leaves him with the final winning trump.

Of course, it is easy to make the play once the hand is stripped down to the position given. The important thing is to get it into that condition. This may necessitate, in the early play, the ruffing out of some of the diamonds in one hand or the other, so that neither North nor South has any diamonds left when West is put in the lead. The declarer must be careful to carry out his early play so as to leave at least one trump in each of his two holdings.

Remember the three vital elements to such a finishing play. First, there must be at least one trump in each holding; second, a losing card of the same suit in each hand; third, a loser of a third suit to be led to a defender who can return only a suit or suits in which both declarer and dummy are blank.

Since its beginning in 1789, there have been 11 chief justices of the U. S. supreme court.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"Sandy, to tell you the truth," said Norma's grandmother, "has an idea that you're not very deeply interested in Norma. After all, you were in Phil's office, you know, and as Sandy says, these office friendships! Sandy is perfectly confident that you'll not stay under that arrangement, that Norma can't have two governesses, and, as Sandy says the child will very quickly find herself too busy and too taken up with her friends to worry about it any longer. I'm telling you this quite frankly, because I want you to understand that, whatever happens, we can't make Sandy angry, because she's in constant touch with Norma's mother."

When Jocelyn spoke it was smoothly and sweetly; she had risen as if understanding that the interview was over.

"Mr. Fordyce is going to Washington on Wednesday," she said. "Perhaps since there have been so many changes and so much confusion, it would be better to leave it as it is. I'll see Miss Sanderson now, and I'm sure we can come to an understanding."

Philip Fordyce returned from Washington five weeks later. He held Norma at arm's length and looked at her with great satisfaction.

"Well, Seventeen-years-old," he said, "I hear good things of you."

"I'm an angel," Norma reported complacently.

"She really has been good?" Philip asked, kissing his mother.

"Very good," said his mother, unenthusiastically.

"I told you so," Norma said. "It's Jocelyn. We're having a party every Friday night if I'm up in my lessons. We have fun! Pencil games. We nearly go crazy."

"That sounds like good fun, Philip said believing his ears. "How's Sandy?"

"Awful. Jocelyn will tell you But there hasn't—been—one thing she could report to Mother!"

"Look here, are you behaving yourself to spite Sandy or to please Granny and me?"

"To spite Sandy!" Norma answered joyfully. "We don't have dinner with you tonight, Dad; we have it in the old billiard room Friday nights, and we sing. It's fun!"

She presently went off to dress, and Philip followed suit. Descending to the library at seven, he sent Lorenze to summon Jocelyn. But upon entering the room he discovered that he was not to see her alone. Jane Kimberley, graceful, gentle, with touches of pure silver banding her dark hair, held out a welcoming hand. She had fine brown eyes, and tonight as she smiled at him they wore their most affectionate expression.

"Home again, Phil."

"It feels good, too. I'm hoping to stay here for a while now. I hear everything's going well."

"Everything goes well when you're back," Jane said. "My dear, dear old boy!"

She put her hands on his shoulders as she spoke, and Philip quite naturally put his arms about her and kissed the upturned face.

Jocelyn had come flying downstairs at his request. He was home again, and she would have a good report to make him of her trust. She was halfway down the last broad shallow flight of stairs when she saw, as if it were a little scene from a play, the two figures in the library; the tall woman with her dark silver-streaked head close to his shoulder; the tall man with his arms about her.

Jocelyn stood stricken for an endless minute. Then she turned and fled up the stairs to her own room, and stood there panting. The room went around slowly, more slowly. In the quiet and emptiness of it Jocelyn spoke aloud.

"So that's what keeps you here. So that's what you're thinking about, Jocelyn Britton? You idiot! You idiot! Well, now you know! Now at least you know!"

Every weekday morning at quarter to ten the car came around the drive to the front door, and Jocelyn and Norma were driven to Palo Alto, where in the dozen low-roofed, oak-shadowed buildings of the school they spent three hours at various studies: Italian, history, English letters. Jocelyn from the beginning entered into the lessons wholeheartedly; it amused and flattered Norma that, in the matter of languages at least, she was far ahead of her companion. She spoke fluent French and had had some years of Italian study, she had found both languages spoken more or less correctly, and with Jocelyn's urge she could easily keep in with a class of her age in which she was placed. The history and English work was easy for Jocelyn, and it was a pleasure to make a showing in these.

tion as the days went by.

There was something magnificent about the waste, the extravagance, the luxury of the place. And in the ideas and ideals of its inhabitants Jocelyn found the same elements a constant wasteful abandonment of one pleasure-seeking plan for another. Norma's short life and her grandmother's long one had been broken into the irreconcilable scraps of a jigsaw puzzle: Antibes, London, somebody's yacht, somebody's villa in Hawaii, with the Freddy Wilkinsons in their adorable Palm Beach place, with the Blossoms in the gorgeous Irish castle, with the Mallards at Tahoe.

There had been only a fraction of Mrs. Fordyce's activities; to Norma's had been added innumerable schools, countless sessions with governesses and companions, countless educational lectures and musical Saturday mornings, encounters, always unsuccessful, with stepfathers, and a series of escapes and flights.

Both had interspersed these interests with much shopping, much trying of new clothes and new haircuts, whatever movies or circuses were available, baby dances, little-girl parties, older parties, dinners, bridge games, and then the sudden reappearance of all trunks and a start through the same procedure all over again. At seventeen, Jocelyn calculated, Norma had lived in about forty different places and sets of apartments, and temporarily inhabited about twice that many more in hotels, trains, ships, clubs, schools.

To reconcile this particular girl to a quiet-home-life program that included plenty of study seemed to Jocelyn, at first, an impossible undertaking. But she soon discovered that beneath Norma's sophisticated and bored exterior was the hungry heart of a girl who had been cheated of real affection and real small-girl pleasures Norma was starved for love, for companionships and fun; she never had had any real interests in her life, and as Jocelyn somewhat doubtfully offered them she seized upon them like the child she was.

Jocelyn had begun with a small dinner party and pencil games every Friday night. At first she had to carry these affairs pretty much on her own shoulders, but by the third evening the young persons were enthusiastically managing them themselves, and when she broke up the meeting at midnight it was always under a storm of protest.

The next Friday after the one on which Philip arrived at home the party was such a hilarious success that Philip, coming home somewhat early for him, found them still laughing and circling about Norma in the hall at a few minutes before 1 o'clock.

Then the Parker boys' mother, one of the few women of the group who had won Jocelyn's admiration, asked if she might not have the same sort of party, with no cocktails and no punch, at her house on Sunday nights, and Norma exulted that she, Norma, had started a fashion. "Graveyard brawls," Charles van der Lipp called them, in scornful allusion to their liquorless character, but he came regularly, and Jocelyn was pleased to see growing up between him and Norma a real brother-and-sister affection and understanding.

Miss Sanderson's alleged position was now that of companion and adviser to Mrs. Fordyce and superintendent of Norma's activities and those of Norma's youthful governess.

"You've got to stay, Sandy dear," Mrs. Fordyce, hating and fearing her, had said cordially. "You understand Norma's mother and you understand her, and no matter what temporary arrangement we have to make to keep the child quiet, we'll need you Go drown yourself, you old ghoul," Mrs. Fordyce had added, in her soul.

But Sandy had accepted the meaning of the spoken words. She had settled down in a comfortable room, had begun to drive and irritate the maids to madness and had devoted herself to a discontented and scrupulous watching of Norma and Jocelyn. Everyone in the house knew that the moment either one slipped, Sandy would get in touch with Norma's mother, and machinery would instantly be set in motion to remove the child from Philip's guardianship.

But Jocelyn had this great advantage now, that Norma loved her. She would do nothing without her "Jotsy." Jocelyn had moved into rooms adjoining Norma's own, and often the younger girl would come in at night when Jocelyn, thoroughly wearied after the strain of the day, would much have preferred to go on with her reading, to sit on Jocelyn's bed and talk on unwearied into the night. She was insatiable in her interest in Jocelyn's life; she wanted to hear all the details of her childhood, what she had worn, what she had wanted for Christmas, what her friends had been. Norma would be quickly jealous of the Sausalito cousins, if Jocelyn quoted Bam or Sissy; she wanted to visit them and know them all, and have them like her. Her affection was overpowering at times; her constant desire for Jocelyn's company was anything but restful, but Jocelyn was wrapped in a dream now, and day by day what Norma seemed less important and less real.

For the first few weeks after Jocelyn's return to Hill Acres she had seen Philip not at all, he had been absent in Washington on a law case. During this time she had concentrated upon what she hoped to do for Norma, or at least begin to do for Norma, and when Philip returned she was secretly elated to realize that he found a real change in his daughter.

Ohio Candidates Launch Torrid Week of Campaigning

WILLKIE AND FDR SET FOR BUCKEYE TOUR

G. O. P. Nominee To Speak In Jackson County; Roosevelt In Cleveland Saturday.

(By Associated Press)

Ohio's fall election campaign boiled into its final week today with Buckeye candidates intensifying pitched battles and President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie poised to renew personal bids for the state's 26 important electoral votes.

Willkie, Republican presidential nominee, delivers his final Ohio pre-election speech in Jackson county tomorrow at noon. Mr. Roosevelt makes one of his major pleas for a third term in Cleveland Saturday.

The Jackson committee said preparations had been made to accommodate 100,000 persons for Willkie's talk in a natural amphitheater on the Hill farm a mile southeast of Jackson on route 35. Willkie's special train is scheduled to arrive from Louisville, Ky., at 11 a. m. and leave two hours later for Charleston, W. Va.

A large crowd, gathered at Mingo Junction for a glimpse of Willkie yesterday, failed to see the candidate. He had planned to attend church but abandoned the stop on advice of his physician because of a slight cold, and his train continued west to Indiana.

Meanwhile, Ohio's gubernatorial candidates, Republican Gov. John W. Bricker and his Democratic opponent, Martin L. Davey, take to the air tonight in their regular weekly radio broadcasts.

Bricker broadcasts from Dayton at 6:45 p. m. after a noon address in Cincinnati. He goes to Springfield from Dayton and will join Willkie in Jackson tomorrow. Speaking in Lansing, Mich., Saturday night, Gov. Bricker said New Deal officials "time and again" had threatened to withhold federal money from states unless they complied with "half-baked rules adopted by a bunch of theorists at Washington." Yesterday he greeted representatives of 17 nationality groups at a Cleveland gathering.

Former Gov. Davey told a week-end meeting of Democratic women in Cincinnati that the party in Ohio was in "better shape" than for 10 years previously and praised the work of county organizations. He broadcasts tonight at 7:15 p. m. from Cleveland, where he is making a series of appearances.

The U. S. senatorial aspirants, Mayor Harold H. Burton of Cleveland and his Democratic opponent, John McSweeney of Wooster, continue their series of debates in Columbus tomorrow at a luncheon of the Franklin County League of Women Voters.

Striving to avoid the lot of other Ohio candidates who have been overshadowed somewhat by the campaigns of party standard bearers, Burton and McSweeney debated national issues yesterday at the St. James African Methodist forum in Cleveland.

Burton, the Republican nominee, warned that this election "may be the last chance to vote for peace" while McSweeney claimed his opponent had joined in New Deal programs.

Father Promises All Possible Aid To Slayer of Boy

CINCINNATI —(INS)— William G. Ponder, of Birmingham, Ala., stood by today prepared to "do everything I can for my boy," as his 27-year-old son faced grand jury action in connection with the knife-slaying last week of 40-year-old Clarence Stevens, of Cincinnati.

The accused man, Guy Willie Ponder, allegedly confessed to authorities that he slashed the child to death in the basement of Holy Name church school. Ponder was to be asked to repeat his confession to the jury.

The elder Ponder arrived yesterday from his Alabama home and described his son as "unhealthy as a baby."

Ohio Conscripts Due at Camp Shelby Dec. 2

Although he lays no claim to the title, John A. Dalton, 107 Vennum avenue, is probably one of Mansfield's most patriotic citizens. Recently Dalton erected a flag pole in the front yard of his home, and every morning at sunrise he raises an American flag to the top of the pole. Promptly at sundown, he hauls the flag down, closely following military regulations. The only thing that is missing is the blare of the bugle and the rumble of the drum, to make it strictly in the U. S. army style.

A worried young man appeared at the courthouse this morning to explain that his name was not included in the lists of registrants posted in the city and published in yesterday's News-Journal. He said he registered Oct. 16 at the proper place and wanted his name and number posted like the others. After listening to his story, County Treasurer John E. Kolb, whose name did not appear on the list, told him, "That's what I call nothing to worry about if you have your registration card, for I know a lot of fellows who wish their names weren't on that list." The youth took his complaint to draft board No. 3.

Several city employes, eligible for the draft, got a first hand idea of how the national lottery will be held in Washington this morning when City Auditor Paul Kelley staged a mock demonstration in his office. Blindfolded Ruth Durig, deputy auditor, pulled the little capsules containing the eligible members' correct number from a honest to gosh fish bowl. Each draftee was presented with a package when his number was called—what did they contain? A toy soldier and a package of "rollin's." Kelley explaining that they could practice rolling cigarets before they are called for service.

Three deer heads hanging on the wall of the Boy Scout office came close to being "killed" all over again this morning when Lawrence R. McIntyre, 275 South Diamond street, came into the office with his huge hunting dog. The dog, seeing the deer heads on the wall, immediately pricked up his ears and made for the heads, apparently bent on a meal of venison. The only casualty, however, was a bit of plaster knocked off the wall by the dog.

278 ESCAPE AS LINER GROUNDS

Coastal Liner Ploughs Into Shore at Full Speed; Rests on Trees.

PRINCE RUPERT, B. C.—(Canadian Press)—The million-dollar coastal liner Alaska lay with her bow almost in the trees on the shore of Elliott bay today while her 278 passengers thanked luck and the efficiency of the ship's crew for their escape from the icy waters.

The 366-foot, 4,658-ton liner ploughed full speed into the shore 20 miles south of here at 12:30 a. m. (PST) yesterday, shoved her nose across the beach and listed 20 degrees to port. Oil from her forward tanks spread across the bay and eight feet of sea-water flooded into her forward hold. Her stern remained in 24 feet of water.

Capt. O. C. Anderson, fearing the vessel would slip off into deep water, immediately ordered the passengers and six crewmen to abandon ship in the inky darkness.

Partially dressed, covered with oil and shivering with cold, the passengers tumbled into boats and pulled for shore while an S.O.S. was summoning the liner North Coast. Some passengers fell into the water, but none was lost and none seriously injured.

While they waited for the rescue ship, fires were built on the shore and the travelers sang.

Captain Anderson and 115 crewmen remained on board ship, awaiting salvage efforts.

INITIAL DRAFT DETACHMENT TO TOTAL 10,000

Will Bring Buckeye Division To Wartime Strength of 18,000 Soldiers.

(By United Press)

CAMP SHELBY, Miss. — The first batch of civilian conscripts, many of them from Ohio, will join the 37th Ohio division here for training on Dec. 2, Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler revealed today.

He said the initial draftee detachment would total 10,000 bringing the division to 18,000 men or wartime strength.

Not all of the 10,000 are expected to be from Ohio. Guesses on the number of draftees from Ohio in the first call place the total between 2,000 and 5,000 men.

Selective service officials at Columbus say they have no information on either the state's complete draft quota or the proportion who will get the initial call. The national lottery will be held tomorrow at Washington and then begins the work of local boards to classify the registrants in order that their numbers "come up."

Beightler's announcement came after he conferred with Lieut. Gen. Herbert J. Brees of San Antonio commander of the third U. S. army. Gen. Brees visited Camp Shelby yesterday.

"He was well pleased with everything," Gen. Beightler said. "He was satisfied with progress of camp. Nearly $400,000 will be general training plans."

Officers of the 35th started "classroom" training today for one week before they apply the theories of military science to Ohio troops next Monday.

Nearly 10,000 workmen are pushing construction of housing facilities and training aid at the camp. Nearly $400,000 will be spent for new rifle, machine gun and artillery ranges.

With arrival of Ohio conscripts only five weeks away, officers now in camp were enthused by prospects of promotion. Eventual expansion of the 37th division to 18,000 men from its present 9,000 means many promotions to higher ranks and commissions to lieutenants.

Gen. Beightler and his staff attended a church reception in nearby Hattiesburg last night. He told the audience his men were in for a lot of hard work but that the army will show proper regard for the fact that many of them are "unseasoned."

About half of the men in camp attended church services yesterday.

ILLNESS FATAL

Mrs. Fannie Barney, 64, died this morning at General hospital following a lingering illness.

Born in Continental Dec. 17, 1875, she came to Mansfield 20 years ago. Mrs. Barney is a member of the First Christian church.

She is survived by three sons, Edward of St. Louis, Mo., and Harry and Trentis at home; three daughters, Mrs. Marie Lightbill, Mrs. Earl Shirkey, and Mrs. Ernest Price, all of Mansfield; two brothers, William Snyder of Ft. Wayne, Ind., and Louis Snyder of Ontario, Can.; and five grandchildren and one great grandchild.

The body was taken to the Wappner funeral home today, pending funeral arrangements.

GUN COLLECTORS ATTEND MEETING

Three members of the Ohio Gun Collectors club from Mansfield attended a regular monthly meeting of the club at the Chittenden hotel, Columbus, Sunday.

The Mansfielders were Mr. and Mrs. Guy Shauck and Joseph Toth. Guest speaker at the affair was Mayor Floyd Green of Columbus.

The next meeting will be held in Springfield in November. Over 3,000 guns were on display at the meeting.

MAN STABBED

Rides Street Car to Hospital After Row Over Girl.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Bearing two stab wounds, 3 inches deep in the pit of his stomach, Robert Wallace, 27, boarded a street car shortly after midnight Saturday and rode to Charity hospital, a mile away, for treatment. He was reported in critical condition today.

Police said the stabbing occurred during an argument over a girl. They held a 20-year-old suspect for investigation.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Speaking for Myself.

I wonder when the autograph seekers who devotedly "cover" the 21 front, the Monte Carlo awning, Shubert Alley and the Sherry-Netherland marquee will discover the Central Park Reservoir Strolling club, which is still carrying on despite the recent cold snap. The reservoir is patrolled daily by a distinguished fraternity who, at the drop of a hint, will tell you there's nothing like it—not gymnasiums, not golf courses, not tennis courts.

Any day the autumn squirrels can glimpse George M. Cohan, David Warfield, Lee Shubert and John Buckmaster hiking around the footpath that rims the reservoir. Young Buckmaster is secretly working on a sketch showing the idiosyncrasies of the Strollers.

I like the way the doormen and ticket takers at the Music hall wear identification pins with their names printed on the discs — Rockefeller "billing" even for the lowly employe. When the tall lad at the door takes my tickets I feel that because he has his name gleaming from his lapel I should say something polite to him, like "And how are you this evening, Mr. Chittleworth, and how do you like the picture?"

The town glitters these evenings—sparkles like a Cole Porter rhyme, gleams like the diamonds on a glamor girl, shines like a torch singer's eyes shine when she sings. The dancers' feet are light on Broadway, and the music at midnight is lilting. The city is fairyland. I wonder if it is really as gay as it seems. Perhaps it is the faraway shadows that make this place so bright; perhaps the distant drums make the near music sweeter.

This was really the year for marriages. Between Leap Year and the draft it's a wonder there's a spinster left in the U. S.—including Shirley Temple. . . . It intrigues me to see Mrs. Harrison Williams, one of the world's best dressed women, strolling with William Rhinelander Stewart, one of the world's best dressed men. . . . I wonder how many Manhattanites have never been to Brooklyn, and vice versa.

Nothing has as much genuine atmosphere—real Jack Londonish, Joseph Conradish atmosphere — as the waterfront cafes on this island. . . . The new automobiles are fascinating, but they don't look like automobiles any more. They look like contraptions designed by Buck Rogers.

My sole ambition at the moment, after being caught in another theatrical district cab tie-up last night, is to beat this nerve-fraying jam by arriving at the theater in one of those detective squad cars which can whisk through seemingly impassable traffic tie-ups at high speed. And so, dear Commissioner Valentine, if you've got a car that's not going to a holdup some evening, have the boys pick me up at 8:20.

I'd love to know how they play a harp—especially the way Casper Reardon plays a harp. . . . I wish some night club would put its acts on at 10:30 to take up that "dead spot" between the dinner and supper shows. People who are going to the theater can't go to the dinner shows, anyway, because the entertainment is never over by curtain time—and people who aren't going to the theater have no floor show possibilities from 8:30 until after midnight. A 10:30 divertissement ought to be a boon for nightlifers.

I wonder if firemen really wear red suspenders. . . . Hildegarde wore a corsage of twelve orchids when she boarded the train for Chicago the other day. This is more orchids than I have ever seen on one girl, including Peggy Hopkins Joyce and Ethel Merman, who are the orchid-wearing champions, and I would certainly like to know who sent them.

I've never met a gag-writer, and I always picture these fellows as lads who sit in little smoke filled offices being witty so somebody else can be funny in front of an audience. I'll bet that when they are not sitting at their desk wringing humor from their typewriters they are gloomy fellows, and I don't blame them.

I think Frances Langford and Jon Hall are a charming Hollywood couple. . . . I wonder what Broadway Rose does with her money? . . . I can't imagine why they call them Western Union "boys." Most of the ones I see look like granddaddies.

Girls waiting for dates in the lobby of the Astor around 7 o'clock always have that afraid-of-being-stood-up look in their eyes. . . . Romo Vincent, the buxom comic now at the Paramount, is probably the only person who ever played that stage who could be seen from the last row in the balcony.

Lots of the Broadway movie cashiers are as pretty as the girls on the screens inside the theaters. . . . I think the names of Turkish rug dealers are even more fascinating than the monikers slapped on Chinese dishes.

I have a feeling that if there were more plays on Broadway like "Charley's Aunt" there would be more theater and a more prosperous box office, because here is a play that is gay and hilarious and unmindful of any problem except the one of making people laugh, and it is a play that anyone—Little Junior or Aunt Mehitabel—can see without blushing, which can be said of no more than six other shows currently on the boards.

I think all stage entrances should have little steam-heated booths for the waiting stage-door Johnnies. . . . I am happy to learn from one of her friends that Margie Hart, the strip teaser, wears monogrammed garters.

Ella Fitzgerald who is always swell to listen to, seems even better these evenings at the Tropicana on Swing Street — and wouldn't any street be swing street with Ella singing there? . . . Strange to see M. P.'s in uniform patrolling 42nd street between Broadway and Eighth.

Cab drivers are always so talkative I think they ought to be called "gabbies." . . . Strange how theatrical superstitions are carried out with such precision sometimes that you almost begin to believe them. A dancer in the Phil Harris shows tells me that on their first day of rehearsal a stagehand dropped dead. The second day a show girl fell into the pit and injured her skull.

The cast, electrically aware of the "things run by threes" superstition, all crossed their fingers. Then Lyn Logan, the glamor girl of the cast, was run over by a cab and badly hurt! Now they can relax, knowing that, under the old hex law of the theater, nothing else can happen.

Most successful novelists write much more excitingly than they talk. . . . I like the Stock club's new red marquee—it's like a bright flag beckoning: "Come in! Come in!"

Peg Strickler and Emily Burns greeting friends after church. . . . Mr. and Mrs. H. S. (Tubby) Jones dining out with friends from Galion. . . . Automotive Team Registers First Win

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE

ANN ARBOR—(U.P.)—It'll go in the record books as Michigan 14, Pennsylvania 0, and that'll be wrong. The way it should read is Tommy Harmon, 14, Pennsylvania 0, because it was the Gary Galloper who played poison to the Quakers' Ivy and cracked them open like the Liberty bell.

Without Tommy and his 195 pounds (every ounce of which is All-America) Michigan would have been fortunate to get off with a scoreless tie. By this I mean that Michigan, without Harmon, isn't as good a team as Penn.

But with him the Wolverines are as good as anybody, because Tommy is a one-man squad. When he isn't running he is tackling and when he isn't doing either of these he is passing, kicking or blocking.

He actually constitutes a threat when he is standing still doing nothing at all. He proved this by the way his presence as safety man ruined Pennsylvania's kicking game on Saturday. Frank Reagan, a really great punter, was so afraid that one of his punts would fall into the hands of Harmon that he went in for super-spot kicking.

As a result his timing and confidence went blooey and he wound up with a kicking average that wouldn't do credit to a high school back. The dread of a Harmon loose after a head start so shook Reagan that punts skidded off his foot to travel such puny distances as 20 and 25 yards.

After Harmon's performance on Saturday I trust no pigskin pedant will ever again argue that a back is no greater than his blocker. Ever since Harmon started running wild there have been critics who maintained that his effectiveness was largely due to the tremendous blocking of his friend and captain, Forest Evashevski.

I don't want to belittle Evashevski's value, but Harmon can go with or without him. Evashevski was hurt just before the end of the first half and didn't get back into the game.

But Harmon kept rolling just the same. As a matter of fact, he was at his best as a big, bruising, yet cunning back, near the end of the fourth quarter. He ripped off two long runs in which his interference was negligible. He simply ran over the Quakers who stood in his way.

The much anticipated duel between Harmon and Reagan didn't come off. Harmon was on the firing line, ready to go, but Reagan arrived from Philadelphia with no ammunition.

Frank gained something like 350 yards against Michigan last year, but he gained only 10 yards this time. He was jittery as relatives at a will reading.

He never settled down. He not only couldn't run, but his kicking was miserable and his passing spotty. It was unfortunate that Frank, who has played so many brilliant games, had to have a relapse at a time when the spotlight was on him the hottest.

Harmon's eight points in the Penn game brought his season's total to 87 and if there were any such thing as an assist in football he would have even more, because it was his perfect peg from the 27 yard line while hounded by Penn tacklers, that resulted in the second Michigan touchdown.

When the time comes to start picking the All-Americas don't worry if you can't think of three backs to go along with Harmon. He doesn't need 'em. Except to keep him company, perhaps.

Mansfield Semi-Pro Gridders Turn Back Sandusky Maroons, 14 to 6.

THE Automotive Supply semi-pro players had something to celebrate about today. Unable to register a win in five starts, the Supplies invaded Sandusky high school field yesterday and handed the Sandusky Maroons a 14 to 6 beating.

Before meeting the Maroons the best efforts of the Supplies was a 6-6 tie with Carrollton.

Coach Earl McMullen's gridders went to work in the first period yesterday and had the game on ice before the Maroons knew what had happened.

Shortly after the opening kickoff, the Supplies downed a Sandusky punt on their own 28. Al Schwaner, Vern Heiser and Radarski sparked the drive as the Mansfielders moved to the Sandusky seven-yard line in a series of off-tackle plays.

Then Radarski smashed through right guard for the score—the first one the Supplies have accounted for in an opening period of a game.

Mansfield's second tally came shortly afterwards when Al Schwaner tossed a 25-yard pass which Clayton Luckie gathered in on the Maroon three and raced the rest of the way. The aerial climaxed a 60-yard march featured by power plays. Al Schwaner split the uprights twice for the extra points.

A hurried Mansfield punt set the stage in the second period for the lone Sandusky score. The Maroons took the ball on the Mansfield 38 and marched for a first down on the Supplies' three. On fourth down Kruiger, former Sandusky high star, hit center for the touchdown. His kick for the point was wide.

Mansfield, which registered 15 first downs, battled to add more points in the second half. Once the Mansfielders drove to the Sandusky 14 where they lost the ball on a fumble. A little later the McMullen-coached club reached the Sandusky 25. Sandusky had seven first downs.

* * *

Outstanding for Mansfield were Al Schwaner, Vern Heiser, Harper Au, and Radarski in the backfield and Sturgeon, Brosser, Ed Zediker, Luckie and Bill Russell on the line.

Ohio Coach Says Snavely Guided Team

Schmidt and St. John Make Claim After Saturday Game.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—An accusation by Ohio State university's athletic bosses that Coach Carl Snavely "quarterbacked" his victorious Cornell team from the bench in Saturday's game is "unwarranted and contrary to fact," Snavely reported today.

The charge came from L. W. St. John, Ohio State athletic director, and Coach Francis A. Schmidt shortly after the Bucks were drubbed 21 to 7 at Ithaca, N. Y.

* * *

Snavely, St. John explained, manipulated a light-colored cylinder to direct his team. He would grasp it by the end for a pass play, St. John said, in the center for a sweep, in both hands for a line smash, and then cross his legs and swing a foot to indicate he wanted a punt.

"It was a crime," Schmidt remarked.

Snavely gave this reply:

"Mr. St. John's charges are unwarranted and contrary to fact. The officials of the game were perfectly competent and were empowered by the rules to take action in the case of illegal activity on the bench or sidelines.

* * *

"If Mr. St. John had any complaints, they should have been made to the officials during the course of the game."

* * *

"Every time he sent in a sub," Schmidt said of Snavely, "the sub's shoe was untied. And as he knelt to tie it, someone on his team would kneel down to help him. I guess the sub did a lot of against-the-rules talking while his friend helped him tie the shoe."

Haley, Springer Mark Up 'Aces' at Westbrook.

When it comes to making holes in one you have to take your hats off to Bart Haley and William A. Springer. The two Mansfielders accomplished the feat within an hour at Westbrook Country club Sunday — and on the same hole. The men did it on the 127-yard No. 8 hole. Haley and Springer both used a No. 6 iron. Haley, incidentally, secured his first. It is the third ace scored on that hole this season. Bob Moorhead, club champion, scored an ace against Dr. Art Sprecker in a semi-final match of the club golf tournament.

Donnelly Becomes League President

FREMONT—(U.P.)—Joe Donnelly, Van Wert, took over the presidency today of the Class D state baseball league succeeding Paul Shank, Toledo.

A co-organizer of the loop in 1935, Donnelly said he would visit all league cities within the next two weeks to aid in possible strengthening of clubs. Further plans for the 1941 season will be discussed by league officers at Fostoria in November.

* * *

Other officers elected were Carl P. Stemle, Fremont, re-named vice president and Marlin "Dod" White, Fremont, secretary. Donnelly will also act as treasurer.

Records Show Football Fans Bet More Than Turf Followers

By PAT ROBINSON.

NEW YORK —(NS) One might suppose that the average turf follower bets more than the average football bettor but such is not the case.

Pari-mutuel records in this state show that the average bet made on a race is close to $6. But a survey among Broadway bookies today discloses that the average bet on any football game is about $20. Of course, one may bet as little as $2 on a race but the football bookies won't accept any bet under $5.

The books seem away out of line on some of their prices for this week's games but they insist that the result of games to date show that the odds reveal a better winning percentage than does any expert selector.

We expected to find certain teams made favorites today but instead we see them quoted at 9 to 10 and you pick 'em. Lafayette, for instance, we thought would be favored over Army but the bookies say their information makes this game a toss-up, hence the 9 to 10 price.

At the same figure we find Detroit and Villanova, Michigan state and Santa Clara, Vanderbilt and Louisiana State (although the former may be the choice down south), Oregon State and UCLA (we took a flyer on UCLA), Penn State and Temple, Stanford and Southern California and Tulane and North Carolina.

* * *

Cornell is quoted at 6 to 5 over Ohio State but the bookies expect O. S. to enter the game the favorite. Harvard is the same price over Dartmouth and Marquette the same over Texas Tech.

A PEOPLE KEPT IN IGNORANCE IS A NATION Enslaved..

In America the People Have

1. FREEDOM OF SPEECH
2. FREEDOM OF WORSHIP
3. FREEDOM OF ASSEMBLY
4. FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

"And These Shall Never Pass Away"

The world has learned many lessons since a Hitler strode across the stage destroying, corrupting, hating. It has looked at this horror and seen one inalterable fact—that the disease of fascism first strikes at the Press!

Once the Press loses its voice, the people are blinded to the truth, gagged, silenced. Once the Press is dictated to, the people are put in chains—and fascism plants its barbarism upon a nation.

Wherever dictatorship has come intor power, the first shadow of its coming has been cast upon the pages of the Press . . . If in America, the Press is ever denied its right to differ, argue, opinionate; if it be deprived of its inalienable heritage to cry out against injustice, to challenge corruption—then the Bill of Rights would be dead, the Declaration of Independence a memory, the Constitution a myth—and America a land of goose-steps!

Consider the Press abroad—silenced, inert, decadent; told what to write, when to write, how to write! Consider the people abroad—crushed, blinded, gagged; told what to do, when to do it, how to do it!

Fascism annihilates the liberties of all by first crushing the Press. With a free Press dead, the people are easier victims . . . this is the picture under Fascism!

IN AMERICA THE PRESS IS FREE — PRODUCT AND GUARDIAN OF DEMOCRACY . .

LET'S KEEP IT FREE!

Let us face facts . . . Today, free men and free institutions are fighting for their very lives. Leading this fight for freedom in America is the Press! The very heart of liberty, the very core of our heritage is in the Press. That truth can no longer be mumbled or mouthed in truisms. It must now become a salient, fighting message for the American people. During the years that this nation has forged ahead as the outstanding champion of civilization as we know it, the Press has clarioned the voice of the people. Never once has it faltered, never once has it laid down its cudgels in behalf of truth and justice. While there is darkness in the world, the Press will struggle to bring light. It is your weapon against chaos.

LEADING ISSUES BACKING DOWN IN MART TODAY

Lacking Support Were Steels, Aircrafts; Commodities and Bonds Are Mixed.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Leading stocks backed down fractionally in today's market.

Lacking much support were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft N. Y. Central, Consolidated Edison, Westinghouse, General Electric, DuPont, and Standard Oil of N. J.

Bonds and commodities were mixed.

As an industrial barometer, the earnings statement of General Motors, came in for considerable market study.

It was noted the company, despite a sharp increase in taxes, showed net profits in the third quarter equal to 31 cents a common share against 15 cents in the corresponding 1939 months. Net for nine months was placed at $2.83 compared with $2.39 last year.

Boardrooms scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that new orders for metal in October had been the heaviest for the year to date although probably not as large as in the like period of 1939.

ONE DIES, SIX INJURED IN AREA MISHAPS

Carl Hunger, 46, Rail Worker In Crestline, Killed In Accident Near City.

will be in the Memorial Park cemetery, west of Mansfield.

Besides the widow and son who were riding in the car at the time of the accident, survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Helen Elliott of Mansfield, Mrs Virginia Rhodes of Bellville, and Mrs. Rose Manley, at home; the mother, Mrs. Julia Ann Hackett of Shelby, and a brother, Ray C. Hunger of Akron.

Four young people received minor injuries early Sunday when two cars collided on route 30-S three miles west of Ontario.

They were John Gregg, 20, of near Galion; Robert Spears, 23, Galion; Miss Opal Garrison, 24, of 143 Boughton avenue, Mansfield, and Dorothy Christ, 30, of the same address. They suffered arm, face and head injuries. The Galion men were treated at Samaritan hospital in Galion. Gregg and Spears were riding with Dwight Hart, 25, of L. D. 2, Galion, and the two Mansfield girls with Thomas Fumac, 23, of 382 Third avenue, Mansfield.

Mrs. Arthur Conner, 329 South Diamond street, received minor injuries at 9:30 p. m. Sunday when the car she was driving figured in a collision with a taxi driven by Francis Steele, 117 West Fifth street, at the intersection of East First and South Foster streets. Mrs. Conner's car turned over.

Worst accident in Ohio was a two-automobile collision on U. S. 30-N. near Beaverdam in Allen county, which took three lives. Victims were Harry Charleston, Indianapolis, and Mr. and Mrs. John Moser, St. Petersburg, Fla. Moser was 56 and his wife 36. The Mosers were returning home from a western trip.

William S. Deudney, 22, and William De Castro, jr., 20, employes of an Akron novelty firm, were killed when their truck rammed into a culvert on U. S. 224, seven miles west of Tiffin.

Sam Fox, 55, Brookville, was the luckiest man to escape death over the week-end. Harry Kimmy pulled Fox from his stalled automobile parked on the Pennsylvania railroad tracks in Brookville, near Dayton, a few seconds before the crack Spirit of St. Louis express demolished the car. Kimmy was attracted to the scene by the sound of the racing motor of Fox's car. He jerked Fox from the front seat just before the train struck the car. Railroad officials said they would file charges against Fox.

Other traffic fatalities were Doris Bullough, 4, Canton; Julius Gutier, 58, Hartville farm hand; William Bachman, 74, Columbus; Charles Johnson, 7, Martins Ferry; William D. Kirkpatrick, 72, Dayton, all pedestrian victims; Miss Amanda Kurtzhal, 36, Cleveland; Charles R. Smith, 36; John Reed, 37, Jewett, O., Harrison county, all victims of vehicle collisions.

MANSFIELD NEWS IN BRIEF

Permit Issued—A building permit for construction of a $5,500 residence at 966 Paxford place, was issued at City Hall today to K. R. Oswalt, rear 578 West Fourth street.

Taken To Cleveland — Curtis King, R. D. 2, Mansfield was removed Saturday night from General hospital to the Marine hospital in Cleveland, members of the family revealed today.

Dividends of $1 Declared By Directors

period last year, the chairman said.

For the 12 months ended Sept. 30, 1940, orders amounted to $321,798,000 as compared to $190,469,325 for the corresponding period in 1938-39, representing an increase of 61 per cent, Robertson told the board.

Sales billed for the nine months were $174,998,003 compared with $129,602,676 for the same period in 1939, an increase of 35 per cent. Billings for the twelve months were $220,466,690 compared with $168,025,474 for the same 1939 period, an increase of 31 per cent.

Unfilled orders at Sept. 30 were $151,665,857, compared with $58,337,790 at Sept. 30, 1939, an increase of 160 per cent.

Following their meeting, the directors made an inspection of the Merchandising Division plant here, which is now being considerably expanded to meet the demand for refrigerators, electric ranges, roasters, electric irons and other consumer products manufactured by Westinghouse.

They were greeted by Frank R. Kohnstamm, sales manager of the division, and L. E. Osborne, manager of manufacturing.

"We have sold more refrigerators this year than in any previous year in our history, and sale of all our other appliances also has increased appreciably," Kohnstamm said.

"This favorable business trend has continued throughout September and to date this month. We are confident that fall and holiday buying will continue in this direction for the balance of 1940."

Kohnstamm stated that the anticipated increase in sales of all lines for the remainder of this year will continue well into 1941, due to greater consumer acceptance of electrical household appliances. He pointed out that other factors such as the new housing facilities provided by the national defense program and other Federal housing activities, as well as the expected general improvement in employment, would contribute to increased sales.

Osborne explained that the expansion program of approximately $1,500,000 now being completed at the Mansfield works will increase the floor space by 170,000 square feet. The principal items are a new 1,000 foot industrial bridge, already completed; a new metal-stamping building which is nearly completed, and a new warehouse, on which foundation work is now under way. Osborne reported that the new building will increase materially the present capacity of the plant, which now can produce 1200 refrigerators, 600 ranges, 200 water heaters, and 5,000 irons per day in addition to other appliances.

"In our Mansfield operation," he said, "we receive during the busy period from January to July, an average of 38 cars of raw material daily and ship out 57 cars of finished products. We use 20,000,000 kilowatts of electric power per year. About 75,000,000 pounds of steel goes into our products annually. In addition, wire shelves for refrigerators and ranges require 4,100,000 pounds of steel wire. Each year, we use 75,000,000 screws and 100,000 gallons of paint."

Westinghouse directors who attended include A. W. Robertson, chairman; Winthrop W. Aldrich, George A. Blackmore, G. H. Bucher, president; F. A. Merrick, vice-chairman; Arthur W. Page, Thomas I. Parkinson, John M. Schiff, C. W. Pomeroy, secretary; Roscoe Seybold, vice president; H. S. Wherrett, R. F. Swaine, and John L. Hall.

Directors and other officials attending the breakfast this morning included: Thomas I. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, New York; C. H. Guy, assistant sales manager of the Westinghouse merchandising division; Robert T. Swaine of Carvath, de Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood, New York; and W. J. Russell, manager of engineering for Westinghouse at Mansfield.

Arthur W. Page, vice chairman of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., New York, John M. Schiff, Kuhn-Loeb & Co., New York; L. E. Osborne, manager of manufacturing and engineering, Westinghouse Merchandising Division; G. H. Bucher, president, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., Pittsburgh; George A Ranney, chairman of the board, Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, Chicago.

Greece Defies Italy With War Declaration

Gets Full Support of Great Britain; Turkish Aid Sought; Air Raid Alarms Sound in Athens

ous Greek-Italian frontier at 5:30 a. m. (10:30 p. m. EST Sunday)—half an hour before the expiration of an Italian ultimatum, a Greek communique said.

By noon Athens had undergone two air raid alarms, and in the second anti-aircraft batteries went into action when two Italian planes were seen high over the ancient city. The Corinth and Tatoi airdromes were bombed, and 15 Italian planes in three waves bombed the port city of Patras, damaging port facilities, public buildings and residences, with a toll of four killed and 17 injured.

(Reports from Belgrade said Italian warplanes also bombed the 2,500-year-old port of Piraeus four miles south of Athens. Other planes were said to be supporting Italian land drives at Florina and Kastoria, on the Greek border south of Albania.)

Greece hurled her manpower and resources into the struggle, flatly rejecting demands which Premier John Metaxas said constituted "a declaration of war."

Full mobilization was ordered immediately for the army and then "political mobilization" was decreed, placing all business and industry under government control.

Not even the air raid alarms kept crowds out of the Athens streets where demonstrators cheered, waved Greek, British and Turkish flags, and shouted "Down with Italy."

King George II called on his nation to "fight for its hearths to final victory" and declared "we have been compelled to go to war against an Italy coveting Greece's independence."

The king's message came only a few minutes after Premier-Dictator John Metaxas flatly rejected the demands of a three-hour Italian ultimatum expiring at 6 a. m. (11 p. m., EST, Sunday).

An hour later Athens had its first air raid alarm.

The city's anti-aircraft batteries began firing from their positions atop Ly Cabertus hill when planes were sighted for the first time at 10 a. m. No bombs were dropped.

(Reports from anxiously-watching Yugoslavia said 10 Italian divisions of at least 200,000 troops swarmed across the Greek border from Italian-held Albania promptly at six and were met by be-skirted Greek soldiers.)

Greece looked to Britain—and perhaps to Turkey—for aid.

A British treaty of 1939 promised Greece "all possible support" if her independence were threatened. Turkey has been understood recently to feel that any armed push across Greece would be a direct menace.

(London reported that Greece appealed for help as soon as her border was crossed and authoritative sources predicted "all advisable aid" would be rushed.

(British in Belgrade indicated battle units of the British Mediterranean fleet already were steaming into action.)

Almost as soon as the Italian ultimatum was handed to Metaxas, giving him a scant three hours for the decision which meant war or unresisting occupation, full mobolization of Greek manpower was ordered.

Her army already was estimated as upwards of 100,000 because class after class has been called to the colors in the past several months as Axis threats have increased and war clouds have darkened over the Balkans.

The Greek premier was with his cabinet in emergency session for two and a half hours before the ultimatum expired and officials said at that time that disposition of the army for Greek defense already had been made.

Where the blow would come seemed obvious because of steadily increasing tension along the Greek-Albanian frontier and recurrent reports of heavy Italian troop concentrations on the Albanian side of the border.

Greek guns and soldiers were in place in the Metaxas line—the defense system Greece's strong man had built along the northwestern frontier after Italy first took over Albania.

There was no immediate disclosure of the exact terms in the rejected ultimatum.

Earlier Italy had been represented as wanting "for Albania" slices of Greek territory along the Albanian frontier.

The Italian ultimatum was delivered little more than 24 hours after a new series of "incidents" along the Albanian frontier was charged by Italy—an outbreak of shooting which Italians blamed on Greeks said to have penetrated Albanian territory Friday night and Saturday morning.

Two Greek communiques officially denied any Greek connection with the shooting and suggested that roving Albanian bands were to blame.

of the Fascist march on Rome which put Mussolini in power in Italy.

Political circles thought they might discuss terms for a separate peace for beaten France. Usually well-informed persons thought Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France might yet come to Italy to join the conferees.

Hitler presumably came to inform Mussolini of his talks with Laval, Marshal Philippe Petain, chief of state of France, and Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain, observers said. The latter also may attend the conference, it was reported.

It was the second meeting of the Axis chiefs within the month.

Jugoslavia To Resist Demands

BELGRADE —(U.P.)— Jugoslavia feared today that it would be swept quickly into the flaming war in the Balkans, possibly through demands by Germany and Italy for passage of troops which most Jugoslav sources said would be resisted.

Italian troops, aided by strong air units, opened their attack on Greece on the Camurjia district, just south of Albania, and heavily attacked Konispoli, opposite the strategic Greek island of Corfu, according to reports received here.

Widespread apprehension was aroused here by the outbreak and fear of Jugoslav embroilment was general. Urgent consultations were underway to determine Jugoslavia's position, which was expected to be one of neutrality. A similar position of neutrality was expected of Bulgaria.

Britain Makes Good Her Pledge

LONDON—(U.P.)—Great Britain, responding to an appeal by Greece, will make good its pledge to defend Greek liberty and the admiralty already is dealing with the problem of assistance, it was made known today as the war cabinet met to consider the outbreak of a Greek-Italian war.

It was believed that British men-of-war already were racing to Greece from their Egyptian bases and that Britain's naval and air forces soon would be in the fight.

Britain said that Italian charges of Greek "provocations" and favoritism toward Britain were "merely part of the familiar Axis routine preceding aggression."

The war cabinet met upon receipt of an appeal by Greece for aid.

Naval Battle at Corfu Reported

BELGRADE—(INS)—A battle between Greek and Italian warships near Corfu was reported in advices reaching Belgrade today.

The naval action began, these reports stated, when Italian forces attempted to occupy the strategic island of Corfu.

Other reports to Belgrade said the Greek navy was in a state of complete preparedness and that the morale of the Greek army was "excellent."

No reports on land fighting have been received here so far, but it was understood all roads and bridges in Greece confronting the Albanian border had been mined in anticipating of an Italian attack.

'Stronger Than Ever,' Greeks Say

ANKARA, Turkey —(AP)— Premier Refik Saydam broadcast today that "we are stronger than ever," but made no mention of Italy's invasion of Greece.

It was generally assumed that Turkey's attitude would depend largely on how much aid Britain can give Greece, as well as on the degree of Greece's own resistance.

Although official sources kept silent, no credence was given rumors in other Balkan capitals that the Ankara government was drafting a declaration of war.

Greeks Using British Planes

ATHENS (INS) Using planes supplied by Britain under a long-standing agreement, Greek fliers took to the air today to repel an aerial invasion by Fascist Italy.

A violent battle took place over the Corinth canal connecting Peloponnesus with the Greek mainland when Italian planes attempted to reach and bomb the bridge linking the two areas.

Early reports in Athens indicated that the Greek airmen scored at least some successes in their first baptism of fire in Europe's spreading war.

Fascist planes also bombed Patras, on the northern shore of the Peloponnessus, damaging the harbor, palace of justice, and telegraph office. Four persons were killed and 17 injured.

Nazis Slacken Raids On Britain

LONDON—(AP)—German planes were reported over the west of England, the industrial Midlands, the east coast and South Wales in daylight raids today after a series of widespread raids during the night.

Lunchtime throngs in London were given a brief air raid alert, second of the day.

Bombers stabbed at London in the first grey light of dawn only a short time after the all-clear ended the 51st consecutive all-night raid on Britain's capital—but the first daylight alarm lasted only a short while.

The overnight air attacks on London were "much less" severe than on the previous night, the government said, adding that "the main attacks, which were made in the earlier hours of darkness, were on northwest England and the Midlands."

Royal Air Force warplanes, meanwhile, attacked communications in western Germany during the night, the air ministry reported, as well as oil targets in central and northern Germany and two "invasion ports."

(Officials in Berlin said British planes attempting to reach the German capital were turned back before they reached the outer defense belt and the raid alarm in the city was described as brief. These sources said no bombs fell in Berlin.)

The Merseyside section of Liverpool (docks and shipping) and a Midlands town were reported to have been hardest hit in the night raiding on England. Casualties in these places, however, were said to have been "not numerous."

Before midnight, heavy bombs—both incendiary and high explosive—were falling in sticks of five and six as London's millions remained underground London had six raid alarms yesterday during the day.

Remember The Maginot Line? --- This Is It

Once the symbol of France's military might, the Maginot Line serves only as a bulky, crumbling background for German soldiers cutting the tall grass in the shadow of one of the fortifications. First German move on occupying France was to destroy the effectiveness of the line, which was built to keep out the Nazis.

CARETAKER TOOK CARE THERE WAS NOTHING LEFT FOR OWNER

SAN FRANCISCO— (U.P.) —Mrs. Anna Steinbach, 87, sought rederess in superior court against Ben Werner, a neighbor whom she had hired to care for her pets when she went to the hospital recently.

She told Municipal Judge Theresa Meikle that she heard from friends that Werner wasn't taking proper care of her pets. Despite her illness, she said, she went home to investigate the reports and found that Werner had:

Killed her dog because it ate too much; sold her chickens; given away and sold her canaries; killed her rabbits and eaten them; sold all the goats he could catch; dismantled the barn and sold the lumber; sold Pete, a 30-year-old horse, for $10. To add to her troubles, she said, she learned that Pete had been destroyed for dog food.

And that wasn't all. Werner dug around in the basement and found an iron box containing $630. He then sought buried treasure all over her ranch until it was pitted like no-man's land.

"The charge against you," Judge Meikle said, 'is horse stealing, a felony. We want you to give this woman back her money."

Werner, a toothless man, began pulling bills out of his pockets, his hatband, his shoes. The total was $359.

"Where's the rest?" the judge asked.

"I been under great expense," Werner said. "I had to feed the horse.

"But you sold the horse."

"I had to feed the dog."

"You killed the dog."

"I had to feed the rabbits."

"You ate the rabbits."

"I had . . ."

"Enough," shouted Judge Meikle "You're going to jail. I'm holding you for trial in superior court."

MAJOR ADDRESS BOOKED TONIGHT

President Makes Bid For New York and New Jersey Ballot Support.

A secondary speech was scheduled (at 11 a. m.) at the breaking of ground for a $60,000,000 Brooklyn-Battery tunnel, and there were indications that the chief executive might speak extemporaneously elsewhere along his route, perhaps at the review of R. O. T. C. students at Fordham university.

But he was reserving his biggest oratorical ammunition for the Madison Square Garden appearance. He let it be known in advance that he intended to use much the same tactics he employed in Philadelphia last Wednesday when he concentrated on what he termed "fantastic misstatements" by his opposition.

As on his Philadelphia visit, Mr. Roosevelt's itinerary called for stops at defense program points. But the emphasis was on the campaign, and an array of mayors and other politicians were invited to meet the president as he set out on his auto trip at Newark.

Rep. Mary T. Norton (D-NJ), chairman of the house labor committee, accompanied the chief executive when his special train left Washington last night.

Mr. Roosevelt will be back in Washington tomorrow to open the selective service lottery drawing with an address to the nation.

NUMBER LUCKY

PHILADELPHIA— (U.P.) —Judge Eugene Allessandroni said while hearing a numbers case that "it is only a question of time when there will be another numbers investigation in this city because the old racket is working again." The number of his courtroom is 646. The following day a great number of "hunch" players collected on the number 646.

It bore the initials "H. S."—those of his brother.

SECRETARY NEFFNER PREDICTS EARLY COUNT ON STATE VOTE

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Within three hours after the polls close a week from tomorrow, the voting trend should indicate whether Ohio will back President Roosevelt for a third term or support his GOP opponent, Wendell L. Willkie, Secretary of State George Neffner predicted today.

"I've instructed all boards of election to count the presidential ballot first," Neffner said. "Then they are to phone my office with their count as soon as possible.

"I think returns will come in as early as 7:15 p. m. on election night," he added. By 9 o'clock or 9:30 we should know the national trend in Ohio."

Neffner predicted a record vote of 3,250,000 on election day because of unusual interest in the national contest, especially among women who usually refrain from voting in "off years."

The secretary of state expressed concern over a recent ruling by Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert on marking the presidential ballot. Herbert contended that if a voter marks an "X" in the circle under one party emblem and then proceeds to mark another "X" in the square beside the names of candidates on the other ticket the ballot will be declared invalid.

"That ruling is creating a lot of confusion," Neffner said. "I'm going to take it up with Herbert to see if we can't clarify the matter."

While Herbert's opinion did not apply to "split" voting on the state ballot, Neffner contended that the ruling would confuse voters who usually vote straight tickets except in the cases of certain candidates of the opposition party.

been a candidate for re-election, he might have done better than merely send up verbal trial balloons to see how the popular emotion ran toward foreign events. He could have given an effective leadership then that would have saved us from what the secretary of state now calls 'the gravity of the present situation'."

Willkie spent Sunday, on his way west from New York, working on plans for the final week of his presidential campaign.

During the afternoon the nominee gave out a statement declaring that the New Deal program "has bogged down" because he said, it was "paralyzed by a maze of red tape."

Willkie argued that there has been faulty administration and "a lack of frankness on the part of the New Deal in failing to admit the real extent of federal slum clearance subsidies."

BANK CLERK PREVENTS HOLDUP BY CALLING BANDIT'S BLUFF

CLEVELAND —(U.P.)— An attempted robbery was frustrated at the American Savings Bank this noon, when Teller Paul Ronschka, 37, read a "blowup" note and then jumped to safety.

The bandit, a well dressed man of about 40 approached the teller's window, set a two-ounce bottle of fluid on the counter and pushed through a note to Ronschka.

"There is enough in this to blow us all to hell. Hand me all the moneye . . ." said the note.

Ronschka never finished reading it but jumped back out of his cage and pressed an alarm.

The man grabbed the note, left the fluid and raced out of the bank. He disappeared in an alley.

The bank's eight employes stayed their distance from the bottle on the counter until police came. It was declared harmless.

"I wonder what the rest of that note said," Ronschka mused.

SEEMS LIKE A BAD DREAM

This Mansfield Lady Says She Used To Be In Constant Misery. Tells How Vendol Relieved Her and Recommends Famous Medicine to Others.

MRS. MARION C. STEVICK

Mrs. Marion C. Stevick, who lives on Route 4, MANSFIELD, says, "The misery I used to endure seems almost like a bad dream now, since Vendol brought such gratifying relief. I suffered daily from constipation which seemed to keep my stomach upset so that after eating I'd frequently feel bloated with gas, sour risings came up and felt like a lump was choking me. I often felt embarrassed in company by the frequent belching and sometimes felt giddy with little spots dancing before my eyes, and my head would ache something awful.

"Vendol has done wonders for me and now I can honestly recommend it. It relieved my constipation so nicely and completely that these terrible feelings no longer bother me. I wouldn't be without Vendol."

While everyone suffering from stomach disorders does not have flatulence, indigestion, pain in the heartburn, or lump in the throat, cannot say that any of is caused by constipation, yet if this is definitely due to this annoying condition, you may find that Vendol is just what you are looking for, so why put off trying it? Get some at once from your nearest druggist and see for yourself what this popular medicine can do for you.

There is only one Vendol, and it comes in 3 sizes for your convenience. Larger bottles are the most economical. Sold at leading druggists, recommended especially by Central Drug Store, corner Main and 4th Streets.—Adv.

Hull Prepares to Protect U. S. Neutrality In Balkans

EVACUATION OF AMERICANS NOT DEEMED LIKELY

No Appeals Received From New War Zone; Shipping Already Barred.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Hull said today that the administration is watching developments in the Italo-Grecian conflict closely and preparing to take all necessary steps to safeguard American neutrality.

However, he added that as yet the state department's reports on the new outbreak in the Balkans were incomplete and that he was awaiting fuller information before taking any definite action.

State department legal experts were understood to be drafting a proclamation of neutrality and the other legal forms necessary under the neutrality act which would establish the munitions trade with Greece on a "cash and carry" basis and forbid American citizens to travel on Greek ships. It will not be necessary to extend the so-called "belligerent zone" which U. S. flag ships may not enter the waters of Greece inasmuch as the entire Mediterranean has been closed to American shipping for some months.

Asked if any emergency measures were contemplated to aid the evacuation of Americans from Greece and other areas in the Balkans to which hostilities soon may spread, Hull said that he had received no appeals for aid from citizens in that part of Europe. It is understood that virtually all Americans in southeastern Europe except those married to Europeans or those whose interests or duties require their continued residence there already have been evacuated.

As Italy invaded Greece and a crucial turn in the whole European war situation appeared likely, the administration entered a trying 10-day period during which, it knows, it must weigh its every act in the international field for its effect on the impending presidential election.

Hence, high-keyed officials followed the incoming European cables with apprehension. The state department received from its minister at Athens, Lincoln MacVeagh, a summary of the Italian ultimatum on Greece, including the concessions demanded by Rome as the price of peace.

While the Greek legation and Italian embassy reported they have received no information about the fighting from their governments, President Roosevelt prepared to issue the necessary proclamations of American neutrality under the revised neutrality act.

The president, before leaving Washington for New York last night, listened to a four-hour report from Joseph P. Kennedy, U. S. Ambassador to Great Britain, which sources close to the envoy understood was deeply tinged with pessimism over London's outlook for victory. Kennedy, however, withheld his views from the press.

EARLY 'CHUTIST RECALLS PERILS

Balloon Ascensionist Writing Book of Experiences In Barnstorming Trips.

TULSA, Okla.—(U.P.)—Harry V. Meathers, who used to thrill the citizenry of rural America with "spectacular" balloon ascensions, is writing a book about his experiences.

In it, the 66-year-old bushy-haired aerialist is going to tell about how he made hundreds of flights dangling from hot-air balloons, yet suffered his worst injuries in falling from a tree after dropping to earth with his home-made parachute.

He fell in rivers, too. It got so, he recalls, that when he made an ascension near a river or creek he'd contract in advance with someone to patrol the stream in a rowboat to rescue him and save his parachute.

He started going up in the world, he says, when he became an understudy for a balloonist at Springfield, Mo., at the age of 20.

Made Own Equipment.

He made his own equipment from unbleached muslin and ropes. The balloon took 1,150 yards of sheeting. Four hundred yards was used in the parachute.

Experiences? He had 'em by the hundreds. Once he landed almost in the path of a train and the parachute insisted on pulling him toward the track. He finally spilled the wind out of the 'chute in time to save himself. Then he fainted.

Another time he landed at the mouth of a railway tunnel and the draft sucked the chute along the tracks. Yep, another train was coming, but he got out in time.

Then there was the time he landed on an excursion boat in the Ohio river. He missed the smokestack, bounced off the pilot house and landed in the scuppers. He was dressed in an English sailor suit at the time.

Up In Spurt of Flame.

To make an ascension, he propped his balloon on a pole over a trench and built a fire in the trench. Hot air filled the balloon. Just before the take-off, he'd throw a few gallons of coal oil on the fire and rise suddenly in a 45-foot column of smoke and flames that sometimes set the balloon afire. It gave the ascension "that little touch," though.

He received $100 a performance, showing mostly at county fairs, reunions and conventions. He toured England and was paid "by mistake" 100 pounds for his first ascension because the British thought that was his price. He never disillusioned them.

Sisters Arrested For Tossing Onion At Roosevelt Car

A mounted patrolman arrested the girls soon after the incident. The onions landed several feet from the president's moving automobile.

The audience repeated the Allegiance to the Flag, and then Ruth Gwinner sang deKoven's Recessional with Mrs. Robert Manning at the organ. Eligible Again

Although he served in the marine corps during the first World war, Adurn Oppenheimer of Portsmouth, O., shown above with one of his four children, had to register under the terms of the selective service program for possible duty with Uncle Sam's armed forces. Oppenheimer is still within the eligible age group. He was only 13 years old when he joined the marine corps in 1918.

A 27-year-old colored woman was in General hospital today suffering from injuries received by an attack by an unknown assailant who went into her home last night, police reported.

The victim is Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks, 299 North Diamond street, who suffered a fractured leg and spine, hospital attendants said. Her condition was reported as "just fair" at noon today.

Officers said they were told that the woman was attacked by a man who went into her home and beat her. His identity was not immediately learned.

Newly Uniformed High Band Gets Set For Ashland

Following a colorful debut in their brand-new uniforms at the historic Mansfield-Massillon game Friday night, members of the Senior high school band begin practice this week for their coming performance at the Ashland-Mansfield fracas at Ashland Saturday.

The only game the Tygers will play in the daytime, the band expects to celebrate the occasion with some fancy stepping. Several new marching numbers will be incorporated into their routine this week, members of the band said today.

Loud praises of the band and the new brilliantly-colored uniforms were still circulating about Mansfield today, and it is expected that the band will give an even better show Saturday.

The new uniforms were purchased by the Band Mothers club with money raised by "Tag Day" contributions and by the West Fourth Street Festival, staged some time ago by West Fourth street merchants.

REPEAL DRIVE

New Hampshire To Eliminate It's Outmoded Laws.

CONCORD, N. H.—(INS)—New Hampshire is going to streamline her laws.

Obsolete laws, which date back to Revolutionary days, are going to be repealed by the state legislature.

A special commission authorized by the legislature has made a study of aged statutes. Chairman of the commission, Supreme Court Justice Thomas L. Marble, disclosed that his organization studied 2400 pages of laws.

He said 400 pages contained antiquated statutes which should and will be repealed by the legislature when they come into session in January.

Among the laws to be repealed are one which gives parents the right to contract out the services of their children under 14 years of age and another which gives police the right to arrest and lock up in jail for six months "vagrants," palmistry, or a stubborn child, or stubborn servant, or a rogue."

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1940.

It seems that every time issues are "clarified" voters become more confused.

Jersey City will not have voting machines on election day—but it will probably continue to have machine voting.

There's nothing like a political campaign to divert attention from unpleasant realities, and so America joyfully wrestles on the edge of a precipice.

Navy Must Be Kept Strong

YESTERDAY'S national observance of Navy Day held more than ordinary significance because of increasing recognition of the importance of this branch of defense.

For the ordinary requirements of a one-ocean navy, the United States has been well equipped in power and efficiency and, through friendly relations with Great Britain, this had heretofore been regarded as ample protection.

Recent occurrences in Europe and the Far East, however, have revealed a need for a two-ocean navy, and it is toward this accomplishment that the national defense program is now working—with several years required to bring it about.

The theme of this year's observance was "Keep the Navy Strong," and this may well be accepted as a year-round slogan in association with general strengthening of America's military establishment.

The Part That Mothers Play

THIS is not "Mother's day"—in the popular acceptance of that occasion, which is observed on a Sunday in May each year.

But, in a broader sense, these preparations for defensive warfare — with registration of millions of young men for military training and later service, if necessary—make this a time when mothers deserve more thought than they ordinarily receive.

Elsie Robinson had this in mind when she wrote the "Salute To Mothers"—her "Listen World" article which appears on this page today.

Read it—and think!

Valuable Citizen Passes

ONLY those who knew Henry L. Goemann well are in position to estimate his true value to Mansfield during the more than twenty years of his residence here.

There was a sincerity and earnestness about Mr. Goemann that impressed everyone with whom he came in contact, and his keen understanding of local, state and national affairs made his counsel valuable in a broader field than the civic problems to which he devoted much time and study over a number of years.

Regarding participation in politics as among the responsibilities of citizenship, Mr. Goemann was a deep student of government and a consistent advocate of principles and policies which he deemed to be in the best interests of the country as a whole.

His long association with the grain business, in which he was accorded national honors, naturally resulted in an intense interest in agricultural activities and opened opportunities for service during the World war, and in an advisory capacity in later years.

Mansfield gained much from Mr. Goemann's decision to come to this city to make his home. His death is a distinct loss to this community.

Sees Good In Politicians

PERSONS who belittle politicians miss the importance of this species of citizen to government. As a matter of fact, the politician is essential to the continuance of the democratic form of government, according to Carl D. Friebolin, a distinguished lawyer and federal referee in bankruptcy.

"Many of us consider him as a form of fungus or good-natured faker," he told an audience the other day. "But we do recognize that our politicians serve as a bulwark against a totalitarian form of government."

Even with their minor hokum, they help to maintain our two-party governmental system. They disappear under totalitarian regimes because dictators won't tolerate them. Sooner or later, if the hokum becomes a positive evil, the American public kicks them out.

"Not all our politicians are shysters," Mr. Friebolin added. "There are some intelligent politicians who will recognize the evolution in our government. By making the effort to please all the people, a few of these men will become statesmen—with all the best the name implies."

He might have added, for it would be true, that intelligent voters, interested in good government and willing to take responsibility in achieving it, can choose the type of politician they want and so boost the percentage of statesmen.

Drier and Warmer Cycle Entered

A GEOLOGIST, in a report on weather cycles, said recently that the weather is to be drier and warmer during the next 65 years. It is part of "the 200-year cycle of the B series," whatever that means to students of weather and geology. Part of the cycle is already over, but enough is yet to come to change many things.

Some geysers in Yellowstone park have already ceased to spout, the authority says. Lake levels will be lower and rivers smaller.

This doesn't mean that there will be no floods or cloudbursts for 65 years. In weather, as in other matters, there are cycles within cycles and brief periods of excessive precipitation here and there may come, despite the general dryness.

Public Sleeping Bags

THERE used to be a popular song in the modest American metropolis to the effect that "when you leave old New York town you're only camping out." Well, when you go to London now, you're camping out. Or rather, camping in. They're taking to sleeping bags, of the sort that Americans often use on camping trips.

Recent pictures show some of them in use in the underground refuges where half the people in London now sleep. They are obviously well adapted to what might be called community sleeping and may make the concrete floor a little softer. Most of the people couldn't afford the real thing, but it is possible, as American campers have often learned, to sew ordinary bed clothing together in sleeping-bag style.

Cosmetics found in a Mesopotamian ruin closely resemble those now used—which should strengthen the "heredity" side of a popular debate subject.

It's a poor argument that ends in a quarrel.

Listen World!

Salute to Mothers!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SO NOW they're registered for draft. Some 16,500,000 of America's finest youngsters have signed on the line—vowed to give all they have to save democracy. For days the Front Page headlines have been devoted to their praise—and rightly.

But not as yet have I seen a tribute to the mothers they will leave . . . the mothers who have signed away their right in precious, cherished flesh—that somehow, somewhere, democracy may be served. So I salute America's Mothers. Those mothers through whose pain and devoted patience came all this treasure of young bravery.

A strange, mysterious thing, this business of motherhood. No man can understand it and no man should even try. Mere mortals, male and female, invite the miracles out of the craving of their blood. But somewhere, in that union, God steps in . . . answers mere human hunger with the awful gift of Life. And lays upon each gambler the burden of responsibility. So mothers are made. So boys are born. And so, in this conscription year of 1940, wave upon wave of gallant anguish sweeps the land—an offering on the altar of democracy.

Ever stop to think what such an offering means? Easy enough to make a pretty speech about the Beauty of Motherhood, but have you ever been a mother for a year—or an hour? Ever known the cost upon your weary flesh and spirit of one, small expanding life with its endless demands and rebellions? Then, after the long toiling years, with their toll of hopes and fears, and brief, sweet dream of fulfillment, to have to face the loss of all you've worked to have.

No, I'm not sob-sistering. I'm not saying that these boys who have signed up in their country's service shall never return. But I am a mother myself. I know the joy and terror, the pride and pain of making a man. Only to see him pass, when he was twenty-one, to a far adventure from which he will never return. And to go on, for all that is left of my life, with empty arms. Would I do it again? Of course I would! Any real mother would. But I'm telling you—.

THERE ARE NO WORDS FINE ENOUGH . . . THERE IS NO HONOR GREAT ENOUGH. . . . TO REWARD A MOTHER WHO HAS GIVEN HER SON UP TO LIFE, WITHOUT PROTEST.

And while we're devoting columns of praise to these millions of lads who signed on the dotted line, I'm thinking we should give grateful and reverent thought to the mothers who brought their young hands to that line.

As I write, I'm looking at two of them. Mrs. Rose Wall, of 2518 Diamond Street, San Francisco, California, smiling proudly at her four, tall lads—William, Walter, Ray and George—whom she is giving to America's defense. Mrs. Claude Rich, of Valdemar, San Mateo County, California, handing registration cards to her three, husky sons—Bill, George and Jack.

Two mothers, representing many millions. Mothers who'd dreamed of a few, quiet years of peace and pride and well-earned dependence after the long, hard drill of daily service. Only to see their dreams wiped out in that stern muster of America's young manhood.

And you, perhaps, have never given them a thought! You've seen the crisis which demanded those young men. You've thought how fine it was that they should sign without evasion or demur.

But have you ever realized the pain which lay behind their mother's tightened lips . . . the loneliness, which loomed before their hungry hearts?

I have realized. I have thought. Because, for fifteen years, I've lived on a remembered smile. And forced myself to know that we must let them go when "the day" comes. I'm not complaining. I'd do it again as would all those others. But for the sake of the pain I've known, and the pain they are knowing today, I ask you to stop and stand in salute—

TO THE MOTHERS OF AMERICA'S MEN!

PUT-IN-BAY is an important name in early American history. It was in the island's beautiful harbor that Commodore Perry refitted his warships before sallying against the British fleet, Sept. 10, 1813.

It was also from Put-in-Bay that he dispatched his famous message telling General Harrison and the nation: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

This battle between make-shift fleets was the turning point in the war of 1812. The fight, and the century and a quarter of peace that has since prevailed between English speaking peoples, is commemorated by Perry's victory monument. The national government and nine states contributed $591,000 to erect the shaft.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

To Ride the High Horse.

Addison is supposed to have introduced the figurative usage of this phrase in his Freeholder, published in 1716; but it is a pity it was not Alexander the Great, of whom it was quite pat.

The allusion is to the fact that Alexander was not called the Great—although he could very well have been—because he was perhaps the fastest sprinter in his kingdom.

He was however, as snooty about his athletic competitors as he was about his antagonists on the battle field, where all his rivals were royal.

The conqueror's attitude in such matters is established by his reaction to the question as to whether he was going to run in the Olympics.

His historic reply was:

"I would—if those who matched strides with me were kings."

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Power of Words.

Words bring us visions. You will speak
A word of two and I
Will see tall towers rise against
A far-off azure sky.

With words you paint a fairy land
For me, a paradise.
A word or two upon the air
Brings me daylight, surprise

Or grief and sorrow, deepest pain
Words are the high command
Of all this world and yet their might
We never understand.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Delay Angers Refugee Committee, Few Admitted of Those Selected

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It has been carefully hushed up inside the state department, but recently a distinguished group of citizens on the President's Advisory Committee for Political Refugees almost resigned and blew the lid off the appeasement group among career diplomats. The incident is important because it indicates that the old state department appeasement clique still is functioning right under the nose of Cordell Hull.

The president's refugee committee is headed by James G. McDonald, who handled the refugee problem for the League of Nations, and includes Archbishop Joseph F. Rummel of New Orleans; editor Hamilton Fish Armstrong; George Warren; Basil Harris, formerly of United States Lines; Prof. Joseph P. Chamberlain of Columbia, and Rev. Samuel Cavert of the World Alliance for International Friendship. It was appointed shortly after the fall of France at the suggestion of far-sighted Sumner Welles, who felt that the plight of German, Czech, Jewish and Catholic refugees in France should be handled through a central agency.

The committee immediately swung into action and after carefully investigating a long list of refugees, finally recommended that 651 professors, churchmen and former government officials be admitted to the United States. This was two and one half months ago.

These names also were checked by the justice department, which approved them and sent the list to the state department. After that nothing happened. Two and one-half months passed and only fifteen refugees recommended by the president's committee were admitted to the United States.

Roosevelt Issues Visas.

TWO AND A HALF months was a long time to delay when many of the refugees were in imminent danger of being removed from France to Germany. So the committee began to ask questions as to what had happened at the state department. Specifically, they asked questions of Breckinridge Long, assistant secretary of state, in charge of passport visas. In fact, they made life so miserable for the placid Mr. Long that Long even complained to the president that he had appointed a committee of trouble-makers.

At this point Mr. McDonald and other members of his committee stormed down to Washington with fire in their eyes and demanded that matters be straightened out. Accordingly, Roosevelt asked Undersecretary of State Welles and Solicitor General Biddle to investigate. They held a meeting with irate committee members and Breckinridge Long, at which Welles was dumbfounded at the state department's sabotage of the refugee committee.

"But, Breck," he said, addressing the assistant secretary of state, "only fifteen refugees admitted in two and a half months, out of 651? How do you explain that?"

Mr. Breckinridge Long fidgeted and sputtered. He had no explanation.

In the end, Roosevelt assured his committee that from now on their recommendations would be acted upon without two and a half months' delay.

British Children.

WHETHER this happens, or not, remains to be seen. For last summer, when Mrs. Roosevelt was helping to raise money for the care of British refugee children, Avra Warren, chief of the state department's visa division, insisted that temporary visitors' visas could not be given the children, but only immigration quota visas, which sometimes take months to procure. Meanwhile he permitted temporary visas to Nazi business men, such as Dr. Gerhard Westrick.

Mrs. Roosevelt, however, strongly urged a change in this ruling in favor of the children, who she argued were temporary visitors, and her husband promised that this would be done. But as in the recent case of the political refugees, nothing happened.

Finally Mrs. Roosevelt phoned her husband to report the state department's inertia. He assured her that the state department was sure to act later in the day. But it did not act, and Mrs. Roosevelt phoned her husband again in the afternoon, and again later in the day. Finally on the fourth call, with still no action taken, the president picked up the phone and called a minor state department official.

Later Mrs. Roosevelt told this story to group of close friends, one of whom commented:

"The state department has come to a sad state of affairs when the president of the United States can't call up his secretary of state and say, 'I would like to have thus and thus done,' but instead has to call up a minor official in the state department."

Note—Visa Chief Avra Warren, who denied visitors' visas to British refugee children, did not deny them to 70 Czech shoe workers for the Bata shoe factory in Maryland, whom the justice department later deported, charging that the company had been linked up economically with Hitler.

Burma Road.

GUNS and munitions aren't the only supplies which will pass over the reopened Burma road. A large shipment of desperately needed medical supplies, purchased by the American Red Cross with the assistance of dollar-a-year-men from Procurement Division and Defense Commission, will pass over the highway—if Japanese bombers don't interfere.

A shipload of such supplies has sailed from New York for Rangoon, Burma, where they will be transhipped over the famous road to Chungking, capital of the embattled Chinese Republic. Included in the shipment are 70 tons of boric acid, 20,000 tins of ether and 70,000 pounds of antiseptic cotton.

Red Cross officials chose Rangoon because other ports are under Japanese domination.

Campaign Sidelights.

REPS: Some GOP leaders in California may be soft-pedaling on Herbert Hoover, but not National Chairman Joe Martin. Says he in "The Republican," lively GOP monthly: "Mr. Willkie has the pledge of the enthusiastic backing and aid of Herbert Hoover, last Republican and only living former president of the United States.... Here, assuredly, is cause for confidence in the outcome of the November election, but there are other equally potent straws in the wind."

DEMS: Mrs. Roosevelt's opinion of what is the chief issue of the campaign, written for "The Democratic Digest": "Do the people of the United States of America want a partnership in which the government exerts an influence as strong as either that of capital or labor, or do they want a government which is comparatively weak and over which other interests dominate? This . . . is probably fundamentally the most important question before us today."

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—It may be just a little election-time political twister, as some observers here insist, but if those are real straws that I see in the wind, certain politicians are in for a tornado of trouble after Nov. 5.

Why AFTER Nov. 5? That's a good Republican question in some quarters, but the Democratic answer is that, except for the primaries held in recent months, there have been no elections to investigate since 1938 and it would have been utterly impossible to complete sleuthing and prepare indictments before election.

Even if they could have got the cases ready, no court could have moved fast enough to try them. Suppose the persons charged were innocent. Think what injustice would have been done then to persons running on the party ticket of those who had been charged.

* * *

Committees Busy.

THAT'S the explanation given, but to get back to those straws.

1. A Senate campaign investigating subcommittee, with Senator Adams (D., Colo.) as chairman, heard testimony in Jersey City, N. J., where Mayor Hague's Hudson county political machine has been on the griddle for years.

2. Another Senate subcommittee, with Senator Hill (D., Ala.) as chairman, heard testimony in Chicago, where the Kelly-Nash machine, captained by Mayor Edward J. Kelly, has also been under a crossfire of charges from big political guns.

3. Numerous complaints of violations of the Hatch act, the Corrupt Practices act, and civil rights statutes have been filed with the Department of Justice. These are purported to run the whole gamut of election and campaign violations, from minor infringements which might result in federal employes' losing their jobs to the outright stealing of elections by means that could send offenders to the penitentiary.

4. Attorney General Robert H. Jackson has publicly declared an out-in-the-open war on election frauds and all violations of the voting and campaign statutes now on the books, and backed it up by appointing Maurice M. Milligan, U. S. district attorney at Kansas City, Mo., as field general for the drive. Milligan is the 55-year-old attorney who prosecuted Tom Pendergast and sent that long-time boss of Kansas City politics to the penitentiary. Sixty-three other defendants who stood trial were convicted; 36 others pleaded guilty and 169 threw themselves on the mercy of the court.

Call It Window-Dressing.

SOME administration critics say this is just pre-election window-dressing — front to offset charges that machine politics really aren't frowned upon. I wouldn't know about that, but it certainly is a fair guess that even if the tempest is started in the political teapot, it has a chance of getting out of hand and becoming a good stiff blow, if not a tornado.

In the first place, on those Senate committees both the Republican and Democratic parties are represented. If charges against the persons investigated are substantiated, they're not BOTH going to sit quietly by and let the breeze die down.

In the second, if those complaints filed with the Department of Justice are verified, they are matters for the courts, and the Federal courts don't hold their sessions and deliver their verdicts behind closed doors.

In the third, Mr. Milligan has tasted blood, is ambitious the ran for the Senate but was defeated for the nomination by the incumbent, Senator Truman, in a stiff three-cornered battle), and is considered by friends not to be the kind who would take his appointment lightly.

Daily Bible Thought

Wherefore do you spend money for that which is not bread. —Isaiah 55:2.

A Farmer's Diary

Her 'Gift of Gab'

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

"HE'S out in the summerhouse, cuttin' meat," said the farmer's wife, when I asked her husband's whereabouts.

I stood in the rear door watching, as the farmer's heavy knife went in and out, carving the carcass of a 200-lb. hog, butchered early that morning.

"How many did you kill?" I asked.

"Just two. Hogs are low, and I hated to sell 'em just now, but I needed the money. My wife's the one who suggested doin' it this way. I have to hand it to her. She's got the gift of gab and she knew the price of pork. So when she was in town the last time, what did she do but go around and make a dozen calls, takin' orders for home-cured hams and sausage. Tomorrow she'll go along with me to deliver the goods. Then, like as not, she'll sell a few dressed chickens or some crocks of apple-butter to be taken in next week. One year, when I was sick, she took a neighbor's boy to do the liftin' and sold our whole apple crop, a bushel or two in a place. We always get more for our crops when we sell 'em direct to the folks who need 'em, but I'm no salesman. I don't like to go avistin' strangers. It takes the woman's gift of gab to put it over."

I watched him pile the sausage meat into a great heap beside the grinder and begin to cut the lard fat for frying. He had rubbed the hams with prepared sugar cure and pumped the brine inside the pieces, along the bone, so that the cure would permeate.

"Butchering isn't the job it was when I was a boy," I said.

"No, it used to take weeks of salting and smoking to cure a pig and then it wasn't ever twice alike. Now we're sure there won't be any waste. What we don't sell, we can use ourselves. And when you consider the difference in price we'll get, we're makin' wages by doin' the extra work."

His wife, a neat spry little woman, with humorous eyes and a firm chin, came in with the newly-cleaned sausage casings. She turned an electric switch and began to grind the meat, easing it expertly through the machine into long smooth lengths of sausage which were coiled into an enameled dishpan.

"Your husband says you are quite a saleswoman," I told her.

"Me? Oh, no! All I did was talk to some of the girls I knew, and they told their friends."

Need for Approval of 1-Mill Levy Stressed In Series of Stories

Police Chief Points Out Population Of City Nearly Doubled But Says Department Remains Same Size

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of signed stories by city officials explaining the need for passage of the one-mill levy at the Nov. 5 election and how the levy will benefit their respective departments. Today's article deals with the functions of the Mansfield police department.)

By POLICE CHIEF M. K. BATES

The city of Mansfield has increased in population nearly double of that of 20 years ago, while the police department has not been increased by additional patrolmen. The city limits have extended to include that section of the city which is very valuable and is known as Woodland. The limits have been extended to the west of the city to the B. & O. railroad, which includes very extensive territory. It has become our job to police this additional territory without the addition of any man power to the department.

The police officers in Mansfield work in eight-hour shirts—7 a. m. to 3 p. m.—3 p. m. to 11 p. m.—11 p. m. to 7 a. m. They receive every eighth day off and also 14 working days vacation per year. This vacation must be taken before Dec. 31, or the officer loses it. Including days off, vacation days, and sickness which sometimes occurs in the department, at no time are there more than eight men on duty during one eight-hour shift. Many times there are less than eight men trying to do the job of protecting lives and property within the entire city of Mansfield, during their tour of duty.

One man from each shift is detailed to work the radio and receive calls at headquarters. One man is detailed to School Boy patrol and investigation of indigent hospital cases. One man is detailed to the Identification bureau and does all photographing and finger printing of criminals arrested, civil finger printing, photographing all scenes of crimes and all automobile accidents where a person or persons are injured. There are two detectives in the entire department that work the first shift and part of the second shift. They are called back many times on investigations after their regular tour of duty.

Mansfield has been very fortunate in that there have not been many serious crimes committed within our jurisdiction. If we were to have a wave of serious crimes with our limited personnel, the department would probably have to work nearly 24 hours per day. In comparing statistics from criminal records, where there are cities of 50,000 population or under, there should be at least one man for each 1,000 population. In a city of over 50,000 population, there should be at least one man to every six hundred population. According to these statistics, Mansfield, should have at least 40 police officers.

There are many investigations made by our police department, which should be continued, but due to the lack of man power, the proper investigation of these crimes is not complete. There should be at least two detectives on each shift to follow through investigations started by detectives on the preceding shift, as a criminal does not confine his activities to any certain number of working hours. There should be criminal contacts and surveillance made in questionable localities at all times, so the police officer would know who is within our city and what they are doing here. The residential districts should be patrolled by two-way radio cruisers, so that all citizens could be assured of the presence of an officer within two minutes time after they have called headquarters for an officer.

The Woodland section is more isolated than any part of the city of Mansfield, and the property valuation is higher than any in the city, yet they receive less protection than some of the other sections in the city of Mansfield. Citizens should feel that they are safe going to their places of employment or business or anywhere on the streets of this city, with the knowledge that they are being properly protected by the local police department.

The police department provides escort to any persons who have large sums of money to take to the bank or elsewhere, and the calls for this service are increasing daily. We provide escorts for payrolls, motorcycle escorts for parades and funerals, reserve parking space for special occasions, along with regular police duties and traffic patrol. The night officers must try both front and rear doors on all business places in the city—notify the owner if any doors or windows are open in the establishment, or if the night light has burned out or was left unlighted. They must patrol the lower sections of the city almost constantly, as there are more criminal activities there than elsewhere.

The demands upon the department for traffic regulation are increasing daily, however, with the installation of parking meters, they probably will be partially solved. The collection of money received from parking meters can only be used in the regulation of traffic. Any traffic officers added to the department, can be supplied with part of the revenue from the meters. They can only be assigned to traffic duties, and cannot be used for regular police work except in case of emergency.

There now exists a limited emergency in the United States. In case this emergency increases—in addition to all work the police department now has, they will be called upon to protect all factories and public utilities from sabotage. Therefore, our police department, must be increased to handle all these duties that are required, along with additional investigations with federal law enforcement agencies which include the FBI, U. S. Secret Service, Postal Inspectors and Treasury Department.

HELPFUL HINTS

Now All Draft Director Needs To Do Is Find Missing Men.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—(AP)—Paul G. Armstrong, state selective service director, scanned through the mail on his desk yesterday and opined he might well be directing a court of marital relations.

Scores of wives had written him for help in locating missing husbands who, they knew, were required to register for the draft.

BOMB-SIZED

NEW BEDFORD, Mass.—(NS)—Mystery surrounds the "bomb-sized" radishes grown by Joseph Tschaen in his garden. Tschaen claims the radishes are good to eat. They measure two feet in length and weigh about eight pounds, and when picked leave crater holes in his garden. He is unable to explain how they reach such immense size.

NAA SENDS CALL FOR NEW PILOT TRAINING CLASS

Richland Chapter Wants At Least 50 Candidates For Ground School.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

The Richland county chapter of the National Aeronautical association, sponsors of the civil pilot training program here, sent out a call today for applicants for the winter CPT class which will be instituted within the next two weeks.

The organization wants at least 50 candidates for the ground school expected to start at Senior high school before Dec. 1. Applicants will be required to pass a rigid physical examination to qualify for the training.

The 12-week course in primary ground training is open to Mansfield district youths between the ages of 19 and 26. Flight scholarships will be awarded to the 15 top ranking students at the close of the course.

James R. Harrington, airport manager and the government's instructor, said the class is scheduled to be completed by Jan. 31 so that actual flight training can be started by Feb. 15.

Strangely enough, the new application forms which the students are required to fill in tie in more closely with the national defense program than applications previously submitted to the CAA.

New students are required to pledge themselves to apply for flight training in either the U. S. army or navy should they enlist or be drafted into the service.

The course of instruction has also been revised, the 12-week course including 24 hours of meteorology, 24 hours of navigation and 24 hours of aircraft operation. Previous courses also dealt with the history of aviation, which the government has apparently decided doesn't help a student to fly a plane any better, and radio.

And while the new ground school is being organized, 10 students awarded flight scholarships several weeks ago are awaiting flight instructions, but cannot get into the air until additional instructors are provided at the airport.

Harrington says that with the shortened days and most of the prospective pilots taking their instruction after working hours that an additional instructor is being sought to start the class of 10 on their pilot course.

Meanwhile, however, a class of 10 Ashland college students are scheduled to start training at the Ashland airport this week under the direction of Walter Shuey, port operator, and government instructor.

The college training differs slightly from the civil program in Mansfield in that the students get their ground study and flight instruction during the same period.

* * *

With numerous youths in the Mansfield district being graduated from the CAA courses with their pilots licenses application has been made to Washington for advance training program to give them continuous flight training and not let them grow stale.

Harrington says it is expected that with the number of pilots already graduated here that the government will institute the advanced training program early next spring.

WANTS PANTS

DERBY, Vt.—(NS)—Wendell Willkie, the Republican presidential candidate, must either lose a pair of pants or see a Democrat emerge a victor. Mrs. Elizabeth Robbins, wearer of the first Willkie button in Derby, wrote the G. O. P. standard-bearer for a pair of his pants to weave into a rug. She stated she wanted it as a souvenir.

Regular Check On Merit of City's Employes Sought

DETROIT—(NS)—Mayor Edward J. Jeffries, jr., admits that the City Civil Service Commission does a good job of selecting well qualified employes to fill municipal posts. But he is not so sure that all those employes continue to deserve their salaries after a reasonable time period has elapsed.

After checking the facts and conferring with civil service officials, the mayor recently declared approval "in principle" of the establishment of a personnel division of the Civil Service Commission to keep tab on the city's payroll expenditures. Commented Mayor Jeffries:

"Civil Service in Detroit has done an excellent job in qualifying applicants for jobs. Once people are employed, however, nothing is done to check their continuing qualification unless they get so bad that a department head finally fires them.

"It is my opinion that only wholesome results could follow establishment of a system to check periodically on the quality of work being performed and on the matter of whether employes are working in the proper classification and at the salary to which their type of labor entitles them."

DOUKHOBOR DEFIERS OF DRAFT AGAIN GIVE CANADA TROUBLE

TRAIL, B. C.—(UP)—British Columbia provincial police are on the verge of another set-to with the Doukhobor sect, but they still have devised no antidote for the cult's mass disrobings.

The dispute arose over national registration, which conflicted with Doukhobor beliefs that no records of any kind should be kept.

Doukhobor leaders advised their followers to co-operate in national registration. Members of the group known as the "sons of freedom," however, refused—and about 300 of them assembled as Gilpin, B. C., to make a united stand against registration.

Now, police announced they are going after these dissenters. They will register or go to jail, disrobing or no disrobing, say officials.

Protests Lose Force.

Some of the value of their favorite weapon was lost to the Doukhobors last year. When an insurance company was trying to evict them from their mortgaged homes, they staged so many massed disrobings that other people in this district became hardened to it.

So far in the dispute over registration, none of the Doukhobors has disrobed. Police hope none will, for mass disrobings are embarrassing to police, if not to natives of the district.

The situation moved toward a climax when four of the "sons of freedom" were arrested at Gilpin for failing to register.

The four pleaded guilty, and chose to serve three months in jail in lieu of $50 fines imposed. The Doukhobors paraded—but fully clothed. Police had to use tear gas to break up one of the demonstrations. Some of the paraders carried suitcases, and defied police to put them in jail. "We won't register!" they shouted. No further arrests were made immediately.

Later, another arrest was made and police announced a drive would be launched to clear up the situation, one way or another.

Peter Babakaif was the latest to be arrested. Police escorted him to the postoffice here and confronted him with a registration card, but he refused to fill it in. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Insist on Exemption.

Babakaif told the court he was carrying out a "sons of freedom" declaration not to register. "We believe we should be exempt," he said.

The Doukhobors came to British Columbia from Russia early in the century. They have never adapted themselves to Canadian ways of living, but have held to their beliefs. Their history has been one of constant clashes with officialdom.

On several occasions, their stubbornness has caused them to prevail, and they have had their way. They have even been exempted from military service.

In the question of registration, however, authorities promise to be as stubborn as the sect. There will be no exemptions, and police have indicated they will enforce the law, even if they have to jail every man in the group.

MATRONS MEET.

The officers are Mrs. Mary Cheny McCutchensville, president, Miss Thelma Hursh, Mansfield, vice president, and Miss Mary Patterson, Mt. Gilead, secretary-treasurer. Plans were made to hold two meetings each year with the next one scheduled for April 1941 in Bucyrus.

The day of the messy syrup container, that dripped down the sides and on to the tablecloth, seems to be limited with the introduction of a new glass syrup bottle. The new container allows easy pouring without the familiar drip and mess of the old-style tin It fits the hand and is so lightweight even the children can handle it with ease.

Lucy, dear:

WELL, it looks as though that Indian summer I mentioned we might have following our snow storm a week ago really did arrive in all its glory this week-end. In fact, it was so warm yesterday that lots of folks were walking about without coats, and it was almost impossible to get served in the ice cream shops—business was so rushing.

From Milwaukee, Wis comes word that Sister M Noreen, instructor at St. Peter's high school here, is one of the contributors to the current issue of the Catholic School Journal. . . . Sister Noreen comprehensively discusses practical methods to be followed in the use of visual aids in education in her article, which the editor of the Journal has termed a convenient general summary of the problem.

MR. AND MRS. C. F. HILL left this week-end for St. Petersburg, Fla., where they will spend the winter. . . . They are driving south and en route are stopping in Beaver Falls, Pa to see their son, Lloyd Remy . . . Then in Mercersburg, Pa. they will pick up Mr. Hill's sister and brother-in-law, who will accompany them to the sunshine state . . . Incidentally, Lucy, both Mr. and Mrs Hill are past 80 years of age, and this is their sixth trip to Florida. . . . And traveling to another warm state are Mrs. Hugo Young of Loudonville and Mrs. Clarence Yohn. . . . They're going by train to Los Angeles to visit their sister, Mrs. Philip Franklin, for the next several weeks.

Even though his Alma Mater, the University of Pennsylvania didn't win its football game with the University of Michigan Saturday, Paul Schultz of this city was in the crowd at Ann Arbor cheering the players on. . . . Mrs. Schultz accompanied him to the game, and then the couple spent yesterday in Detroit with friends.

SOME other week-end visitors in Detroit were Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Chatlain and their daughter, Barbara. . . . They went up with Mrs. Chatlain's sister, Mrs. Anna Grabis, to visit another sister, Mrs. Charles Collins. . . . And of course the Chatlains experienced the biggest thrill of the day when they saw their son, Ed, a senior at Wittenberg college, play a winning ball game against Lawrence Tech. . . . Oh yes, they went to Greenfield Village too, and attended the wedding of some friends in the picturesque Mary Martha chapel there.

You'll be sorry to learn that Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Oliver are moving to Philadelphia, Pa. early next month. . . . Mr. Oliver has accepted a position in the Quaker City with the John Falkner Arndt Advertising agency, and will begin work there on Nov. 1. . . . He and Mrs. Oliver are going east this week to do a little house-hunting.

RIGHT now you'd better make plans to be in Cleveland on Nov. 8, 9 or 10th, Lucy, because the 39th National Chrysanthemum Show is being held there then in the city's downtown Masonic temple. . . . This will be the first national flower show to be staged there, and in fact, the first big flower show of any kind to be shown in many years. . . . And by the way, its only the second time this mum show has ever been brought to Ohio. . . . The affair is under the active sponsorship of the Florists Association of Greater Cleveland, which represents growers, wholesalers and retailers from all over northern Ohio. . . . There will be, of course, hundreds upon hundreds of competitive exhibits from all over the United States, as well as many spectacular non-competitive displays. . . . Special features will include a display extending from the floor to the ceiling along one entire wall, and a great garden umbrella of Cascade mums—reaching to the ceiling and weighing well over a ton.

Guess that's all for now, Lucy, so I'll be looking for a letter from you in the very near future.

Lovingly,

Marianne

WILBUR R. CLECKNER, MISS HOFFMAN MARRY

Associates In Treble Choir Sing Nuptial Selections Preceding Open Church Ceremony Sunday Afternoon.

THE Treble Choir, of which the bride is a member, sang the nuptial music preceding the wedding of Miss Willamine Hoffman and Wilbur R. Cleckner yesterday afternoon before the altar of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Members of the choir, directed by Mrs. William J. Hazeltine, were robed in powder blue gowns and wore red roses for the occasion.

With Miss Wanda Hess as soloist, they sang Schubert's "Ave Maria" before the ceremony, and at the end of the service, "The Lord's Prayer," by Malotte, as the closing prayer. Just before the exchange of vows, Mrs. Hazeltine sang DeKoven's "Oh Promise Me," and "I Promise You With Heart Sincere" by Oakland.

Miss Alfaretta Bowden, a friend of the bride, presided at the organ, playing "Intermezzo" by Mascagni, Cadman's "At Dawning" and "Because" by D'Hardelot. During the open church ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Albert J. Linder at 3 o'clock, Miss Bowden played "I Love You Truly" by Carrie Jacobs Bond.

Two seven-branched candelabra lighted the altar which was banked with palms, ferns and cyclodiums. Two white beauty baskets filled with pink and white chrysanthemums and pompons were used on either side of the altar, while white satin ribbons and bows marked the pews.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs Jacob W. Hoffman, 461 Wayne street, was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of white paper taffeta, fashioned with fitted bodice ending in the new low waistline with a full flowing skirt. Tiny crystal buttons extended from back of the sweetheart neckline to mid-center of the gown. The sleeves of the gown were puffed at the shoulder and draped softly above the elbow, where they were met by elbow-length mitts. Her virgin tulle veil had lace inserts and was held in place with a halo of tiny pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses and swansonia centered with gardenias and tied with showers of white satin ribbon.

The bride chose her sisters, Miss Marjorie Hoffman as maid of honor, and Miss Marian Hoffman as bridesmaid. Their gowns were made exactly like the bride's, Miss Marjorie wearing aqua taffeta, and Miss Marian, American Beauty. They wore doll hats of wine and American Beauty flowers and shoulder-length veils of the wine tone. Miss Marjorie carried an arm bouquet of Rapture Roses with matching satin shower ribbons, and Talisman roses formed Miss Marian's bouquet.

Mr. Cleckner, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs William M. Cleckner, 432 Shepard road, had his brother, Dale Cleckner, as his best man. His bride's brother, John Hoffman of Cambridge, and Noland Meredith were the ushers.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Hoffman was attired in a gown of powder blue silk crepe with navy accessories. Her shoulder corsage was of Briarcliffe roses. Mrs. Cleckner appeared in a costume of wine chiffon velvet with black accessories and corsage of Talisman and Johanna Hill roses.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, with 35 guests in attendance. The bridegroom's mother presided at the buffet table, which was centered by a four-tiered wedding cake and the bouquets of the bridal party.

Later in the day, Mr. and Mrs. Cleckner left for a trip to Niagara Falls and through western Pennsylvania. For traveling the bride wore a dressmaker suit of black wool trimmed in white lace. Her accessories were of wine, and her gardenia shoulder corsage was taken from the center of her bridal bouquet. Her only jewelry was a tiny gold horseshoe, a gift from the bridegroom.

After Jan 1 the couple will reside in a new home, 1 Massa avenue. They will make their home temporarily at the Wayne street address

The former Miss Hoffman was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school and the Mansfield Commercial institute. She is an active member of Garcia business girls club and has been employed as audit clerk in the office of the Sears Roebuck and company here. Mr. Cleckner also is a graduate of Mansfield Senior high school and an employe at Sears Roebuck.

The wedding was attended by relatives and friends of the couple from Pittsburgh, New Brighton, Beaver Falls, and Racine, Pa., Jacksonville, Fla., Blissfield, Mich., Cambridge and Massillon.
